INDICTED FOR BRIBERY!

True Bill Against a Member of the Legislature Reported to Have Been Returned. Sensational Disclosures Said to Have Been Made.

At last there is to be a real expose of the graft and corruption on Beacon Hill, which has been so prevalent throughout the present session of the Legislature.

As a result o fthe positive action of District Attorney John B. Moran, a number of witnesses have been summoned to appear before the Grand Jury and testify as to their knowledge of attempts to bribe Representatives.

Startling evidence has been obtained from these witnesses.

Representatives Leonard of Springfield, Swig of Taunton and Toland of Boston, and Timothy J. Barter, a resident of Boston, were examined by the Grand Jury yesterday. More witnesses are yet to appear.

No definite information as to the decision of the Grand Jury is allowed to escape that body until the Grand Jury reports, on Saturday.

IT WAS GENERALLY BELIEVED AT THE SUFFOLK COUNTY COURT HOUSE, TO-DAY, AND WAS THE OCCASION FOR GOSSIP THROUGHOUT THE COURT ROOMS AND CORRIDORS, THAT ONE INDICTMENT HAD ALREADY BEEN FOUND, AND THAT THE SUBJECT OF IT WAS A MEMBER OF THE LEGISLATURE FROM BOSTON.

District Attorney Moran has been hard at work on this case since the attempted bribery of members became a common scandal through the statements of a member of the House last Wednesday.

Much of the evidence which he had in his possession, and which he presumably has given, or is about to give the grand jury, was furnished him by the BOSTON AMERICAN, whose investigations on Beacon Hill during this session have given the public the only intimation of the corruption rampant there.

Goaded by the action of the District Attorney, the House of Representatives, whose leaders had decided to hush up the charges made so openly, have placed in the hands of the Committee of Rules a resolution calling for an investigation of the whole matter. The machine leaders are afraid of an investigation, fearing where it may lead, but in the light of Mr. Moran's action hardly dare continue their policy of claiming that there is nothing wrong with the House.

PROBE MUTUAL LIFE AND THE 'MIRTH HOUSE'

NEW YORK, May 8.—The May Special Grand Jury, which has to do exclusively with the insurance cases, will not hold a hearing to-day, as there were certain developments yesterday in the investigation of the Mutual Life which made it necessary to adjourn until to-morrow.

The grand jury will pursue its investigation at this time with special reference to the purchase and supply department of the Mutual and the company's connection with the "House of Mirth" at Albany. Several persons associated with Andrew Field in the conduct of the "House of Mirth" and employes of the purchase and supply department have been subpoenaed. Because of ill health Mr. Fields will not be called as a witness this week. Through his counsel, he has expressed a willingness to appear as soon as his health will permit.

The argument on the appeal from Justice Greenbaum's decision holding George W. Perkins for larceny in connection with the campaign contributions of the New York Life takes place before the Appellate Division to-day.

HE CAMPAIGNERS TO-NIGHT.

The Ascension Club will present the opera, "The Campaigners," at Potter Hall to-night. The play is presented by special arrangement with the Pi Eta Society of Harvard, who originally produced it.

BOSTON MAN'S BODY IN RIVER; MURDER FEARED

Special dispatches to the BOSTON AMERICAN to-day from Detroit, Michigan, tell of the recovery of the body of Nat Wolff, a traveling salesman of Boston, from the Detroit River with all evidences that the man had been murdered.

The man's throat was cut from ear to ear. The condition of the body showed that it had remained in the river for some weeks.

Wolff represented Owen Brothers, an advertising souvenir firm of No. 19 Washington street, Boston. He was employed by this firm January 1, and sent out on the road to cover the State of Michigan. He was recalled from Detroit two months ago, returned to Boston, and has been in the Boston store several times, but has not been seen here for some time.

Wolff lives in Winthrop. His uncle, M. Wolff, has a store at No. 47 Bromfield street.

None of Wolff's relatives in Boston to-day could verify the report that the body of the man found in the Detroit River was that of the Boston man. No cause is known why Wolff should have met with foul play.

EARTHQUAKE SHOCK FELT IN CONNECTICUT

TWO SLIGHT TREMORS AT EASTHAMPTON, BUT NO DAMAGE REPORTED.

Dispatches were received from Middletown and New Haven, Conn., to-day saying that an earthquake shock had occurred in the village of Easthampton, a small place about twenty-six miles from Middletown.

The first messages were very sensational and stated that buildings had been destroyed and that the people were panic stricken.

The BOSTON AMERICAN, investigating the reports thoroughly, found out the following facts:

A slight tremor of the earth did strike Easthampton about 2:30 a. m.

It was felt along the ridge at North High street, where live about half a dozen families.

It was distinctly felt by Mrs. Michael T. Wall, James Walsh and D. J. Moriarity.

Mrs. Wall said that the tremor felt as if some one was shaking the tin roof of her house.

The first slight shock was followed by a second that was hardly more than a vibration. This was also felt by the three persons who detected the first.

No damage whatever was done. No effects of the quake could be noticed to-day. No clocks stopped; no panes of glass were broken. Dishes that might have rattled somewhat did not fall. None could be found broken to-day.

Along the ridge that extends through North High street an earth tremor was felt about a year ago, and it is also recalled that three years ago a shock was felt.

As evidence of what can eb accomplished by enterprising correspondents, the following bulletins are reprinted:

MIDDLETOWN, Ct., May 8.—An earthquake shock was felt early this morning at East Hampton, Ct.

MIDDLETOWN, Ct., May 8.—An earthquake shock was felt early this morning at East Hampton, Ct. Small buildings are reported demolished.

DROP 25 MORE IN SEWER WORK

Twenty-five more heads in addition to 400 yesterday fell from the city payrolls to-day, when Superintendent of Sewers, John J. Leahy announced the suspension of inspectors, foremen and sub-foremen. They will cease work to-night.

PRISONER CLIMBS WALL AND ESCAPES

Climbing over the wall of the Dedham jail yard, William Mulvhey, serving a five-months' sentence for habitual drunkenness, at nine o'clock to-day boldly effected his escape, and has eluded the search of the authorities. Mulvhey had been sent out into the jail yard to gather a bucket of coal when he escaped.

WELLESLEY BABE LOST.

WELLESLEY, May 8.—The two-year-old daughter of George Welch of Blossom street wandered away from home yesterday and for several hours residents of the vicinity hunted [illegible] for the child. The girl was finally found.

GETHRO DENIES OFFERING BRIBES

Representative Frank J. Gethro of Ward 9, Boston, says he knows nothing of any attempted bribery in the House. A BOSTON AMERICAN reporter asked him the following questions to-day:

"Do you know anything about the charges of attempted bribery last week?"

"Not a thing."

"Did anyone attempt to bribe you?"

"No sir. No one offered me any money for my vote."

"Do you know of anyone who was offered money?"

"No."

"Did you offer anyone money to vote against the bill in question?"

"Why, certainly not. I don't know anything about it. Why should you ask me? I have not even been summoned before the Grand Jury with the others."

By a peculiar coincidence a reporter for another Boston paper asked Mr. Gethro substantially the same questions four or five minutes after the BOSTON AMERICAN reporter had done so. Mr. Gethro made the same replies.

LAWSON OFFERS $25,000 TO AID IN CATCHING BRIBERS

Thomas W. Lawson has written a letter to Governor Guild, calling upon him to take action as to the bribery in the Legislature. He has also written District Attorney Moran, offering him $25,000 to be used in rewards, if necessary, to secure the conviction of bribers.

"So patent are their depredations becoming to the common people—that large majority of our citizens, honest men—that if something radical, heroic, is not done within the law, and soon, the common people will surely do as did the citizens of Philadelphia—take into their hands noosed ropes and seek our legislators and their bribers. Then woe be to old Massachusetts.

"I am not sure the time is not here when it would be more honest, more honorable, to participate in a noosed-rope bee than to longer stand by and see the laws trampled upon. I repeat, I am not sure. If I were sure I would deem it an honor to be one of the leaders to deal with those habitual criminals who year after year have openly used the State House as their rendezvous while preparing and perpetrating their outrages upon the people.

"If, while the District Attorney of Suffolk County is putting the thumbscrews to the bribers and the bribed in the Grand Jury room to-day, you send a special message to the Legislature, saying in substance that you, the Governor of Massachusetts, demand that the bucket shop bill which has

COAL PRICES DROP AGAIN TO SUMMER SCALE

Stove Now $6.75 a Ton, Furnace $6.25, and Pea an Even $5.

Coal prices have taken another tumble, to-day dropping to what will probably be the prevailing rate for the Summer. The drop varies from twenty-five to fifty cents from yesterday's scale, and from fifty cents to $1.25 from the figures established when the coal strike was threatened.

At the sales department of the Metropolitan Coal Company to-day it was said: "We have reduced the prices of coal all around, the general size, stove coal, being $6.75 per ton."

Wellington-Wild Company—"The prices have dropped and we are selling stove at $6.75 down to pea at $5, the old prices."

Boston Coal Company—"Coal prices are now the same as last year at this time, a general reduction in all grades taking effect to-day."

Brighton Coal Company (independent)—"Prices are down now to what they were last year, a general reduction of from $1.25 to $2 per ton over the past few weeks."

The prices now prevailing, and the prices during the strike crisis, with yesterday's reduction, are shown in this table:

	During strike agitation.	Yesterday.	To-day's scale.
Stove	$8.00	$7.25	$6.75
Egg	$8.00	$7.00	$6.50
Furnace	$8.00	$6.50	$6.25
Pea	$7.00	$5.25	$5.00

MINERS RATIFY AGREEMENT FOR THREE YEARS

Important Action Taken at the Final Session Held To-day at Scranton.

SCRANTON, Pa., May 8.—Peace is assured in the anthracite region for the next three years.

The agreement to continue the award of the strike commission fora period of three years, entered into in New York yesterday by the mine operators and the mine workers' sub-scale committee, was ratified at the final session of the mine workers held at Music Hall to-day.

Several points not apparent at first glance were obtained by the miners yesterday. One is the pact signed yesterday is the first agreement ever made by the anthracite mine owners direct with a union. It is signed by John Mitchell, the district presidents and secretaries of the anthracite union for the men in that organization. It is recognition of the union for which the miners have struggled valiantly for years, even though it does not formally mention the "United Mine Workers of America."

In addition to this, Mr. Mitchell has secured the verbal promise from the operators to look into the cases of the lowest paid workers, with a view to remedying the wage injustices complained of.

There will be general resumption of work at the mines on Monday next.

SUMMER COTTAGE BURNED.

LEE, May 8.—The residence and large barn on the Summer estate of Charles E. Cloud of Brooklyn, N. Y., at Tyringham, was burned yesterday. The loss is $15,000, partly covered by insurance.

STANDARD OIL WORRY MADE SPIER A SUICIDE?

POLICE DOUBT BURGLAR THEORY IN CASE OF ROGERS'S RIGHT-HAND MAN.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, May 8.—Baffled thus far at every turn in their investigation of the death of Charles L. Spier, the confidential friend of H. H. Rogers, active head of the Standard Oil Trust, who was shot and killed at his home at New Brighton, the police are still determined to solve the mystery.

It was given out at first that Mr. Spier was killed in a fight with a burglar. His wife, Mr. Rogers and other friends still claim that he met his death in this manner.

Police Inspector Donald Grant, who has charge of the case, says that he is inclined to doubt the burglar theory. He believes that Spier killed himself. It was learned that Spier had only a few days ago taken out insurance in $75,000, the policies incontestable and payable in case of suicide. There were no evidences of the presence of a burglar in the house.

Killed With Own Pistol.

It is declared, also, that Spier and other Standard Oil men were worried about the leakage of secrets, and the scoring of the trust by President Roosevelt, following the report of Commissioner Garfield, may have had something to do with the matter.

A startling feature of the case came to light to-day, when it was learned that Spier, who had made his wife the beneficiary of the insurance policies, had recently had them changed, naming Alfred Lauterbach, a young lawyer, as trustee to receive the benefits of the policies.

No person witnessed the tragedy. A powerful and ferocious bulldog, noted for his faithfulness to his master, was with Mr. Spier at the time the shot was fired. The dog was found, cowed and trembling, licking the face of the dead man, whom he had followed from the rear of the house, where the shot was fired, to the stairway near the front entrance, where Mr. Spier fell and died.

Dog Made No Deonstration.

The reason for the belief that Spier's own pistol killed him is that the physician who performed the autopsy declares the bullet was of 32-calibre, the same as that of Speir's weapon; that his pistol was found with one cartridge discharged, that there was apparently no scuffle preceding the fatal shot and that the bull dog, a ferocious animal ordinarily, made no demonstration.

Here are the facts that support the murder and suicide theories:

MURDER—He went down stairs after awakening his wife to get his revolver, telling her that he believed there were burglars in the house, and took his dog with him. There was a single shot and then all was still. No sounds of a scuffle preceded the shot. The dog did not even bark. All the doors and windows of the house were secured except one door, which had been opened from the inside. Police Inspector Donald Grant, who has the case under investigation, says that the police are not looking for a burglar.

Peculiar Form of Insurance.

SUICIDE—Two weeks ago Mr. Spier took out a $50,000 straight policy on his life and paid the premiums. Saturday, two days before his death, he took out an endowment policy for $25,000 and paid the premiums. These policies were taken out in the New York Life Company, the only company which issues an incontestable policy, payable whether or not the holder takes his own life. Insistent talk in Wall Street, where Mr. Spier was almost as well known as is Mr. Rogers, his chief, did not connect Mr. Spier with any speculation. It turned on a leakage of Standard Oil secrets with regard to stock market transactions, which for the past month has harassed Mr. Rogers and spoiled his best-laid plans. Mr. Spier had been worried about business affairs, and it was suggested that he, too, had tried to find the course of this leak, and was despondent over his failure to do so.

Friends of Mr. Spier have authorized the offer of $1,000 reward for the capture of the murderer.

CAME TO FISH IN BOSTON WILDS

Four New York and Brooklyn boys arrived here yesterday, prepared to camp out in the dense wilderness of Greater Boston. They had a camping outfit in two suit cases — condensed milk, tin pans, knives, forks and spoons, and fishing tackle to catch the fish which swim in the virgin streams which flow through Boston woods and country places. They were handed over to the police by the captain of the Joy Line steamer, who fed them on the trip over here.

Much surprised at finding Boston was a really, truly city, Clarence Bryce, the leader of these explorers, whose ages range from 13 to 16, said: "We were goin' to camp out in the country. We didn't know Boston was a city. We thought it was a landing place for boats with woods back of it. We were going to live in the woods."

PROOF OF TRUTH

Mr. B. P. Mullen, well known Boston caterer, says: "I was born near St. Patrick's church in Lowell, Mass., and remember Fr. John O'Brien giving my mother a bottle of the Medicine which bears his name. It has been used in my family for nearly 50 years. It has cured me of bronchitis and was used as our family remedy." JEALOUS RIVALRY FOR "TRANCE GIRL" MAY HAVE CAUSED SHOOTING

YOUTH FOUGHT FOR AFFECTIONS OF TOWN BELLE

Shots Heard by Neighbors on Night Barden Received His Wound.

Special to the Boston American.

LEBANON, N. H., May 8.—That Ethel Sturtevant, the girl held in the Haverhill jail for the shooting of Jesse Barden, her former sweetheart, is the victim of jealousy on the part of rivals for her affection, and that Barden was shot either in cold blood or in a duel, is a theory advanced to-day in the mystery.

So startling is this theory in the young men it involves that the detectives and sheriffs have been forced to admit that they may have been on the wrong track.

Ethel was the belle of the village and was proud of it. She had many admirers, some of them would-be sweethearts, and the task of keeping all subject to her wishes was a hard one. Several arguments among her young male friends have resulted in fist fights.

Ethel's life, as told by neighbors who have known her for two years, was like that of many other country girls who are possessed of a pretty face and winning ways. She was fond of dancing and social parties and, as a result, was much sought by the young men.

Foremost among her sweethearts was Jesse Barden, the injured boy, who began his attentions last July. Previous to that time Howard Stone had been attentive to her, and they were often seen together. After Stone had apparently had some differences with the girl, which led to an estrangment, John Barden, brother of the boy who was shot, was an admirer. He had accompanied her to many dances.

SHERIFF SAYS HE HAS CLUE.

Despite the jealousy theory, which takes the blame of the shooting of Barden from the girl and places it upon a man, the police say they will stick to their chase for evidence against the girl. Sheriff Stearns says he has a clue in hand which leads him to believe that the girl had a reason sufficiently strong in her own mind to tempt her to do the shooting in a moment of anger.

The Barden boys and Howard Stone, since questioned by the police along this theory, have become almost dumb on the topic and maintain the greatest secrecy regarding their connection with the case. Jesse Barden, the injured man, will not say much about the line the officers are working on, even though he is nearly recovered from the effects of the bullet, and is about the house.

Barden's condition being so much better, it is expected that the surgeons will be able to probe for the bullet in his right shoulder in a few days. Upon the size of this bullet rests the placing of the crime. The revolver which the girl is alleged to have used is a 32-calibre, and the rifle which it is asserted by some was used is of 22-calibre.

Since the night of the shooting the police have found a box of cigarettes and an empty cartridge box within a few feet of the spot where it is said Barden and some of his friends had congregated previous to the shooting.

CAROUSAL THAT EVENING.

That there was a general carousal among several Etna young men early that evening is the declaration of several of the neighbors in the vicinity of the Sturtevant home. Stephen Hennessy, a farmhand employed by Sturtevant, asserts that one of Barden's friends who had imbibed too freely of hard cider, offered him one of the bottles the crowd had.

In their story to Sheriff Stearns of Lebanon, John Barden and Howard Stone, who assisted Jesse home, said that they had not seen Jesse, and that they did not know where he was until after the shot was heard and he cried for help. Jesse Barden accuses Ethel Sturtevant of the deed, and she in turn denies it. Put through a searching "third degree" several times since the shooting, she told the same story each time, and forcibly denied that she knew anything of the affair until the sheriff arrested her.

FATHER TALKS OPENLY

Although the Bardens and their friends are maintaining the greatest secrecy about the case, in view of the fact that jealousy among some of her admirers has been advanced as the cause of the shooting, Joshua Sturtevant, father of the girl, is not at all reluctant about expressing himself.

"It is purely a case of jealousy among some young men," said Mr. Sturtevant, "and while I know that my daughter had known of a revolver being in our house for more than a year, I am positive that she did not use it that night. If there was any shooting done, it was the work of some of the young fellows who were seeking her company.

"I have learned from reliable friends that there was a crowd of young men a short distance from my house about an hour after the shooting, and at least one of them was armed with a revolver, as he fired several shots close by the home of my neighbors. He was seen only a few hundred yards from my house about twenty minutes before the time the police say the shooting occurred."

GIRL SAYS ETHEL WAS JOLLY AND WAS PLEASANT COMPANY

Special to the Boston American.

LEBANON, N. H., May 8.—At the Israel Fogg farm Mr. Fogg's daughter said last night: "Ethel worked here from December to April 1st and was a splendid house girl, and we all liked her. I have been out with her several evenings, and never saw anything about her actions but that she was full of life and jolly, and was pleasant company.

"John Barden came here quite often and took Ethel to dances. Jesse was here but once and only came in the yard. Ethel told me the reason she stopped going with Jesse was that one night he was to call for her and his brother John got there first with a team and told her that Jesse was not coming. She went with John and when she got back Jesse was there and was angry. He never came to see her afterward."

NEIGHBORS SPEAK IN PRAISE OF GIRL ACCUSED BY BARDEN

Special to the Boston American.

LEBANON, N. H., May 8.—Ethel Sturtevant is still a mystery to her jailers at Haverhill, for she continues in her cheerfulness and has not shown a sign of fear as to the outcome of the mystery as to who shot Jesse C. Barden.

As time goes on the doubt as to the girl's guilt grows stronger.

The story of her as "The wonder child" of Brockton is not given much credence here, for she has never exhibited any of the symptoms described during the two years she has lived in this section. Her life as told by neighbors has been like that of any other country girl.

When Ethel went to Etna, two miles distant through a wooded road, and when she walked or rode home, alone, she is said to have carried a revolver for protection, as she had met other foot travelers, but never was accosted in any way by them.

A woman resident of East Lebanon said: "I have known Ethel several months, which was while she was employed at Israel Fogg's, and have met her at neighbors'. She was exceptionally jolly and good company."

WHAT NOTED WOMAN CHARACTER READER SEES IN FACE OF MYSTERIOUS ETHEL STURTEVANT.

PHRENOLOGIST ANALYSES ETHEL STURTEVANT'S FACE

"She Is Very Positive and Very Quick at Decision, Sympathetic and Kind."

"If She Were Going to Retaliate in Any Way She Would Be Quick in Action."

"STRANGELY susceptible to psychological or hypnotic influences," is the burden of the verdict pronounced upon the face of Ethel Sturtevant, the New Hampshire girl charged with shooting her former sweetheart, Jesse Barden, by Madame Rose Albery, the noted phrenologist of No. 1 St. James street.

This opinion by Mme. Albery coincides peculiarly with the stories related of Miss Sturtevant by her acquaintances in Hanover, N. H., and Brockton, Mass. She is said to have been a "queer child," a mystic, and one subject to trances and spells.

Madame Albery, who has read the faces and studied the "bumps" of many prominent Bostonians and other people, was shown a large photograph of Miss Sturtevant. She was not told the story of the unfortunate girl, against whom such a serious charge is now made and, by chance, the phrenologist was not familiar with the details of the case. She was asked to "read" the photograph. Here is her analysis of Ethel Sturtevant's face:

By Madame Rose Albery.

MME. ROSE ALBERY

As I look at the face I should call her a young person of great activity of mind. She is susceptible to psychological or hypnotic influences. It is a spiritualistic face, as we say.

She is very positive and very quick at decision. She is sympathetic and kind. Her benevolence is large. Her affections are select. I see no revengeful characteristics about her.

If she were going to retaliate in any way, which I should not judge from her features, she would be quick in action.

But give her time to consider, she would change her mind for the better, if she had disposition, passionate, as a matter of fact.

When it comes to the analysis of her features the characteristics show in marked manner. The forehead is intellectual. It indicates a tendency toward literature, though not necessarily of a superior nature. She has the constructive mind—that is, she is one who would try to turn the ideas of her mind into writing, either prose or verse.

She is quick to see the detail of things. She has the analytic power.

The upper forehead shows the reflective brain is very large, though the low-hanging hair obscures a good observation. I should say, though, that, if she wishes to give a thought than power of expression—the matter consideration, she would take pains to be careful and to weigh the matter judicially.

The eye shows great reflection. It is the contemplating eye. But it also shows that intense affection that is apt to rise above mental review.

The fullness under the eye indicates more subject thinks more than she can at times say.

The nose is rather literary.

The mouth is very affectionate—especially toward the round chin.

The ear is not especially indicative. The ear usually shows longevity, but in this case is not significant one way or another.

The line from the nose to the mouth indicates intensity of thought and purpose—very strong if the mind is made up.

On the whole, I should say the subject betrays spirituality and sublimity, a nervous temperament, subject to the influence of mental process.

ALWAYS READ ABOUT MURDER MYSTERIES

That she is precocious, a "trance girl," and a girl of more than normal intellect, is Medical Examiner Paine's (of Brockton) opinion of Ethel Sturtevant. Dr. Paine directed the autopsy held at the time that Mrs. Sturtevant, Ethel's mother, died mysteriously. To a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter the doctor said:

"Ethel Sturtevant is a very extraordinary girl. She is precocious. There is no way to figure out how the child can talk so intelligently and cautiously as she did when we examined her about the death of her mother. Her mind is beyond my methods of reasoning.

"Ethel talked as intelligently about arsenic poisoning as any physician might. She must have been reading up on the subject a great deal. This idea struck us all, and made us suspicious of the girl, but we could get nothing out of her. She was as astute as a lawyer in this regard. The girl fooled us all."

Went Into Trances.

The doctor says that the girl went into, or seemed to go into a trance, several times while she was being examined. The officers tried to frighten her into some kind of a statement, but all their combined efforts were without effect.

Mrs. C. F. Lynch, proprietor of the Union Central Hotel, Brockton, where Ethel Sturtevant boarded shortly after her mother's death, said:

"She was a very queer girl, but very bright. She wrote verses for the reporters who came to talk with her. Inspector Kingman, who is now city marshal, together with several other policemen, called a number of times and had long talks with her. They took her into the parlor each time and shut the doors. They were more than two hours in the room with the girl on one of these visits.

A Very Clever Girl.

"The police were very secretive and nervous, and appeared dissatisfied with their talks with Ethel each time that they came out of the room after interviewing her. Ethel would not say what the police had asked her.

"She was a very, very clever girl. She could fool many people who are many years older than she is.

"Ethel became quite ill while she was here and I sent for a doctor. Along with the doctor came the police. They seemed determined to get the girl to say some particular thing. I heard one of the officers say after they had come out of the sick room, 'It certainly beats me.'

"Ethel objected very much when her father proposed to take her from here to Baldwinsville, to be placed among children of weak minds. She ran away to Milton, but was brought back. Finally she consented to go and was taken to Baldwinsville."

Mrs. Alice B. Abercrombie of No. 10 Compton street, formerly of Brockton, with whom the Sturtevants lived, and who nursed Mrs. Sturtevant at the time of her death in Brockton, said to a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter:

Read About Mysteries.

"They will never convict Ethel Sturtevant of shooting James Barden. She is too clever for any jury. She can fool an army of men. I have known her all her life. I will wager anything that she can tell you all about the Cooper trial, even to the most trivial detail. She was always reading murder stories. As a little girl she would talk almost entirely about murders and people being poisoned.

"Whenever there was a mysterious case before the public Ethel would claim to go in a trance and would bring out a solution with some poison end to it almost every time. She had her mother entirely under her control. She could make her do just what she wanted to have her.

"The night her mother died she came running up to me and said, 'Mother just took something from a funny bottle and I know it is poison.' We immediately searched the room and there was no strange bottle or any poison to be found."

MOTHER SAYS THAT STONE ASKED JOHN TO GO WITH HIM

Mrs. Kimball of Enfield, Jesse's oldest sister, is nursing him at the Barden home. Last night his mother said:

"I feel awfully bad about the trouble and Jesse is very low in spirits. My boys don't drink, and on the night of the shooting both John and the Stone boy assisted in caring for Jesse."

"How did it happen that the boys went to the Sturtevants' home?" she was asked.

"Well, John said he was going up to see Howard Stone and went some time before Jesse left. He went to Stone's house and he asked John to go over to Rugsboro, meaning near the Sturtevant's. They went by way of the road and Jesse cut over the hill."

Mrs. Barden, white-haired with age, is almost ill with worry, as night and day she watches over her injured boy.

At 4 o'clock a reception will be held at the Commonwealth avenue home of Bishop Lawrence.

THIRD SWIFT TRIAL BEGINS

For the third time, Timothy J. Swift, former assistant custodian janitor at the Somerville Federal Building, was to-day placed on trial in the United States Circuit Court before Judge Dodge on the charge of accepting bribes in the awarding of postoffice contracts for postoffice supplies and furnishings to the Bourn, Hadley Company of Templeton, Mass. In the two former trials of Swift, the jury disagreed and the fact of the government's persisting a third hearing is a unique fact in the United States Circuit Court.

Robert T. Bourn of the Bourn Hadley Company is the chief prosecuting witness against Swift, alleging that he trapped by means of marked money, the janitor in a proposition to favor his company for a bribe.

John H. Casey, former prosecutor of the U. S. Circuit Court, who is defending Swift, states that he will show a conspiracy to lose the janitor his position.

PLANNED PRIZE FIGHT IN GATES' WALDORF ROOM

But Young Millionaire Punched Stained Glass Window Instead of Welterweight.

WILLIE LEWIS GOT $500

NEW YORK, May 8.—A wildly delivered blow, a sample of the terrific drives he had "up his sleeve," shattered a stately stained glass partition in the room of John W. Gates in the Waldorf-Astoria yesterday morning, shortly before dawn, and deprived Edward Smith, one of the younger partners in the Gates & Drake brokerage firm, of the pleasure of battering Willie Lewis to defeat or being hurled prone by the champ.

The thing began Sunday night at the Marlborough A. C. boxing exhibition for the benefit of the San Francisco sufferers. In one of the boxes sat F. Augustus Heinze, the Montana copper king; John A. Drake, John W. Gates and a few other millionaires, including Edward Smith.

Mr. Smith comes from Ballston Spa, N. Y. He is worth a few millions of dollars, is married and thirty-three years old. He is more than six feet tall and built like James J. Corbett. He was for several seasons captain of the Saratoga Polo Club. But his hobby is boxing.

So when Jim Donovan and Willie Lewis were sparring at the Marlborough A. C. show, Mr. Smith's eyes snapped as he remarked to John A. Drake: "I can lick any two of these fellows who have been on to-night."

"Yes," replied Mr. Drake, admiringly.

Takes Up Smith's Defi.

Then Paddy Welch, with a mysterious "going-to-do-something" look on his face, came to Mr. Drake and said: "I have $10,000 here that your man can't knock Amby McGarry and Willie Lewis."

But Edward Smith spoke up: "See here, I'm not a profesh; but I'll give $500 to either man if I can't stop him in three rounds."

"You're on," said Manager Bob Anderson of the Marlboro A. C. "You can go at Willie Lewis."

Then Gates, his prompting instincts getting the lead, at once suggested that the semi-social mill be pulled off in his garage.

"Not in a stable for me," said the athletic but dainty Smith. "We'll fight in your rooms in the Waldorf-Astoria, Gates," said Smith.

So half an hour after midnight, Bob Anderson, Willie Lewis and his manager descended from a cab at the Waldorf and joined the Smith party at the supper table.

Capers Like Pugilist.

Up in the Gates rooms the ten men present busied themselves hauling poker tables out of the way and piling chairs on the tables, so as to leave plenty of fighting space.

Mr Smith began to caper around the room in pugilistic style, punching away with both hands, guarding and blocking imaginary blows.

As Mr. Smith was prancing about, guarding and striking, Copper King Heinze asked him, "How hard can you hit, Ed?"

By way of reply Mr. Smith pranced up to the partition and drove his gloved left fist straight through the stained plate glass. The spectators stared in speechless wonder as the glass tinkled down. Mr. Smith could not repress a cry of dismay as jagged splinters of glass gashed his forearm.

Mr. Drake ran for towels, Gates for whiskey, Heinze to call a doctor. It was soon found that Mr. Smith's wound was not very serious, though it will lame him for awhile.

Poor Willie Lewis went up to Johnsons road house to begin training for his coming battle with Joe Gans. All he had to show was $500 Mr. Drake gave him.

RAY OF HOPE FROM THE TWENTY-THIRD PSALM CHEERS Tucker "In the Valley of the Shadow of Death"

SERIOUS MAN NOW INSTEAD OF A GAY BOY

Has Read His Bible Until It Opens Naturally at Favorite Psalm.

By Eleanor Ames.

IN the fourth verse of the Twenty-third Psalm, Charles Louis Tucker is finding help and inspiration in his hour of torturing suspense.

"Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil; for thou art with me; thy rod and thy staff, they comfort me."

Over and over he has read the verse, until the words are fixed in his memory as distinctly as they are blazoned on the printed page.

In his solitude, in the silence of the night, he murmurs the blessed promise which is giving him comfort when he most needs it.

"Though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death."

When the sentence of the law was passed upon him, Charles Tucker entered "the valley of the shadow of death"—a valley which ends in the horrible torture and ignominy of the electric chair.

The shadows are growing deeper at every step.

The valley is narrowing, the darkness is closing in about him.

He seems to find no place where he may turn back. Nor may he stand still. Step by step he must go forward, into deeper, denser darkness.

Only One Ray of Light.

Only one little ray of light gleams along the way—the pale but steady burning star of hope, and the comforting promise of the Presence, the rod and the staff of divine strength and grace.

There was a time in Tucker's life when he was an inveterate novel reader, and when the foolish sentiment of lurid love tales appealed to his immature mind.

But that time has past. With the chastening touch of sorrow, his nature has undergone a decided change.

He is a serious, settled man, instead of a foolish, careless boy.

I am told by those who have been in the closest association with him since he went to prison, that the transformation has been marvelious.

His entire view of life and things and mankind has changed.

Recently he has spent much of his spare time in reading the Bible, and in reading it carefully and thoughtfully. It's appearance bespeaks much use.

The leaves are creased and worn from constant turning.

When he opens it, the pages fall naturally apart at the Twenty-third Psalm, which he never tires of reading.

Breathe Promise of Hope.

All the verses which have appealed to him particularly and which he has committed to memory, breathe a promise of hope and comfort.

Tucker has a strong belief that he will not yet have to go to his death for a crime of which he protests his innocence. He knows the efforts which are being put forth in his behalf.

He believes that Governor Guild cannot close his ears to the voice of the people; that he will grant a hearing and that from that hearing will come a release from the death sentence, and a chance for life.

Just the chance to live, that is the mercy which Charles Tucker craves.

He says he is innocent of the fiendish crime of which he has been convicted, and he begs for the chance to be allowed to live in the hope that some day he may prove his innocence, even if he has to spend years and years behind prison walls.

Personally, I feel far more strongly than I have words to express, that it would be a crime against justice to put Charles Tucker to death in the electric chair.

Never Understood Verdict.

Although present at every session of his trial, I have nere understood why or how he was convicted of murder in the first degree, when he was never proved to have been nearer than one-third of a mile to the Page house the day that Mabel Page met her awful death.

Perhaps the fault is mine, but I have never been able to imagine what the jury heard or saw or found in the evidence, that I did not, that made them bring in that cruel verdict.

The contrast between the mental attitude of juries is strongly shown by the recent Cooper case in Maine.

Here Mrs. Cooper had been infatuated with Charley Northey, had been told by her husband that she must give him up, and had made an appointment for a meeting for that purpose.

She went to Augusta, bought a revolver, loaded it, hid it, made a pocket in her dress for it.

Charley Northey called. She took the revolver from its hiding place, put it in her pocket, and soon after young Northey was found dying, shot through the head by a bullet from that revolver.

Two hours deliberation, one ballot, and the jury said: "Not guilty!"

A Reasonable Doubt.

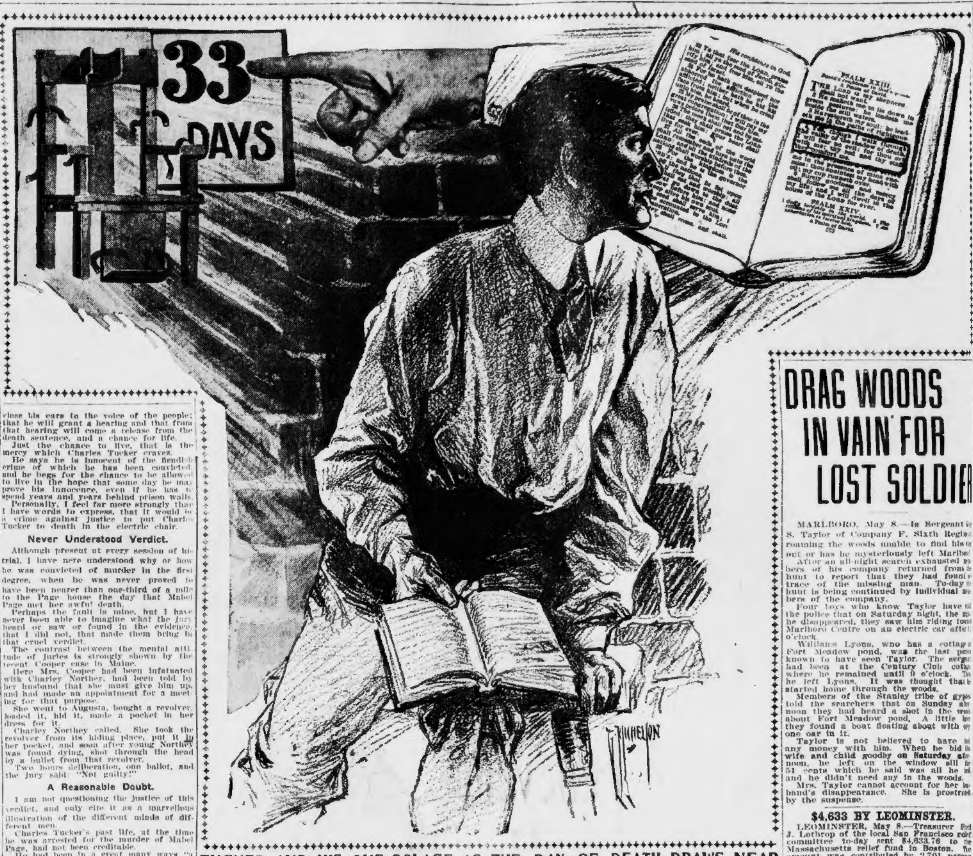
I am not questioning the justice of this verdict, and only cite it as a marvellous illustration of the different minds of different men.

Charles Tucker's past life, at the time he was arrested for the murder of Mabel Page, had not been creditable.

He had been in a great many ways "a bad boy," as he was called. But he should never have been convicted of murder on the strength of past badness.

And without positive proof, it seems a crime beyond belief that any man should go to his death.

Reasonable doubt certainly exists, and reasonable doubt has a standing at court.



TUCKER AND HIS ONE SOLACE AS THE DAY OF DEATH DRAWS NEAR

MYSTERY IN HARVARD MAN'S LONDON DEATH

LONDON, May 8.—Friends of Howard Cary, the former Harvard University student and wealthy New York man, who was found dead in his fashionable lodgings in Kensington last Friday, do not think that he killed himself. On account of his wealth and the absence of any known reason for suicide, it is suspected that murder may have been committed and the revolver placed in Cary's hand just as he died to give the appearance of suicide.

Cary, son of Clarence Cary of No. 17 East Fifty-fourth street, New York, has just arrived in London. Last Thursday he dined and attended the theatre with Lord Fairfax, his cousin, who was at one time a clerk in a New York bank. Lord Fairfax was born an American, and did not assume his British title and citizenship until four years ago.

The victim of the mysterious shooting, who was twenty-four years old, left Harvard last June and planned the trip abroad which resulted fatally. He would have been graduated from the Cambridge university in 1907. He was a lover of athletics and a member of the Knickerbocker, Racquet and Tennis and Harvard Clubs.

Four boys who know Taylor have the police that on Saturday night, the he disappeared, they saw him riding Marlboro Centre on an electric car afte o'clock.

Williams Lyons, who has a cottag Fort Meadow pond, was the last known to have seen Taylor. The serg had been at the Century Club cott where he remained until 9 o'clock. he left Lyons. It was thought that started home through the woods.

Members of the Stanley tribe of gyp told the searchers that on Sunday noon they had heard a shot in the about Fort Meadow pond. A little they found a boat floating about with one oar in it.

Taylor is not believed to have any money with him. When he bid wife and child goodby on Saturday noon, he left on the window sill 51 cents which he said was all he and he didn't need any in the woods.

Mrs. Taylor cannot account for her band's disappearance. She is prostrat by the suspense.

SEEK POISON IN FOOD FROM MUENTER HOME

CARBOY OF WATER AND BREADSTUFFS IS TURNED OVER FOR CHEMICAL EXAMINATION

The Cambridge police early to-day delivered a carboy of water and breadstuffs taken from the home of Erich Muenter, the missing Harvard instructor in German, whom the police have suspected of poisoning his wife, to the Harvard Medical College, where a chemical examination will be made this week. Professor Whitney will oversee this important work. The water and food stuffs were taken from the Muenter home shortly after the death of the teacher's wife.

It developed to-day that it was to ascertain the result of the examination of the articles from the Muenter home that the inquest was continued. It is said that upon the finding of the chemists in their examination of the foods and drinkables taken from the Muenter home will largely depend Judge Almy's finding in the case.

Chief of Police Pullen of Cambridge has placed Inspectors Neilon and Cox, who have been assisting Captain Hurley in the search for Muenter, on other cases. Captain Hurley will continue the work unassisted.

No Poison Found in House.

Although poison traces have been found in Mrs. Muenter's stomach, up to the present time there has been no discovery of poison in any form about the house. Chief Pullen of the Cambridge police is positive that arsenic was given to Mrs. Muenter either in her medicine or daily nourishment. He gave orders to have the food and water found in the Muenter house seized and guarded.

"I am more than ever convinced that we shall find poison in some form or other in the water or nourishment we have taken to Professor Whitney," he stated to a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter to-day. "The absence of other clues, in itself, strengthens me in the belief that if Muenter gave poison to his wife he did it in the most natural manner possible in her food. As everything in the house was at once guarded upon report of the case, I have every reason to hope that a poisoned dish or glass raised to Mrs. Muenter's lips on her deathbed may be found."

Inquest to Be Soon Resumed.

"The inquest will be resumed as soon as the result of the examination is given out.

"An effort will be made to complete it as soon as possible, although it will be conducted in a thorough manner, for Professor Whitney, as well as myself, realizes its significance in the evidence which will prove Muenter's guilt or innocence."

SENSATION HINTED IN CHASE DEATH MYSTERY

Special to the Boston American.

LYNN, May 8.—A sensational finding, as a result of the inquest into the death of Mrs. Jennie P. Chase, the woman who was found dead in her Swampscott home under most mysterious circumstances, will be made before Friday, according to Judge Berry of the police court, who has presided at the inquest.

Judge Berry's statement leads officials and outsiders familiar with the case to believe that immediately after the finding is delivered an arrest will be made.

Dr. Horace K. Chase, the husband of the dead woman, has been the most prominent figure in the case. He found her body in the kitchen of their home, with the gas in the room turned on.

There are two points of especial importance, to which Judge Berry is giving his most careful attention. These are the note which was found beside the dead woman, supposed to be her dying letter, which it has been testified, is not in her own handwriting.

The other is the testimony of Professor Whitney of Harvard University, who examined the stomach of the dead woman, that he had found sufficient arsenic to cause death.

INDICTMENT RUMOR IN BRIBERY CASE

just been killed by bribery be again introduced under a suspension of rules and passed, for a long time to come there will be no repetition of the damnable deeds which for fifteen years past have done more than all else to create anarchists in the most law-abiding community in the whole world.

Many to Prison.

"If you but do this, unquestionably at the same time the District Attorney of Suffolk County will lockstep to Charlestown fifty to one hundred of the blacklegs.

"The present session of the Legislature has been most basely corrupt. It sprang for that bill which the District Attorney introduced to crush abortionists like a tiger to its prey and shredded it. At the same time it pounced upon the food poison bill and killed it. It fell upon the children's overtime bill as does the hyena upon the victims of the scourge, and then to celebrate its dastardly act it turned to and thrust down the throat of every large city of the Commonwealth a law allowing their degenerate classes to prolong their debancheries.

"It emasculated the bill of the District Attorney for office help necessary to enable him to deal justice to the high as well as the low criminals of the State, and then, to show its contempt for decency, it allowed itself to be sold and bought for money—dirty money—on the very threshold of your executive office.

Want Anti-Graft Candidates.

"Can I say more to call your attention to the need, the necessity, for a radical move on your part right now? Only this: The people of Massachusetts will know at the Fall election of the doings of this session of the Legislature. You will be the standard bearer of the Republicans. To a man we want you to have another term, and still another one if you desire. Against you, in all probability, will be the present District Attorney, John B. Moran, the man who upon his say-so that he 'dared' the people overwhelmingly sent to office. Next Fall this man will go before the people of Massachusetts as the man who 'did dare,' and if you will allow the present cyclone of legislative crime to go unpunished, what are the chances of a Republican victory?"

Important Information.

In his letter to Mr. Moran Mr. Lawson writes, substantially as follows:

"Learning that there had been wholesale bribery in the defeat of the 'Logan Bucket Shop bill,' I offered a reward of $5,000 for information which would convict a principal to the bribery. Such offer has brought me important information. There is now no doubt in my mind that at least seventy members of the Legislature were bribed; that at least a score of persons were engaged in the bribery, and that over $70,000 was expended in bribes.

"I do not know as the following offer is proper, but I will chance having my good intentions carry it through, knowing full well if it is improper your well-established reputation for "horse sense" will see me through.

"If at any stage of your examinations or negotiations with these scoundrels you are up against it where you think that a reward is necessary to start the ball a-rolling I herewith authorize you to pay any such rewards as your good judgment dictates will advance the cause of justice up to, say, $25,000, and I will send you check for same upon notification. Unusual? Yes, I know it is, but we are living in unusual times, and just now are dealing with a bunch of unusual rascals.

"Trusting that you may land every slime-coated scoundrel who has had to do with this dirty crime, and assuring you I will consider it a favor to be called upon for aid of any nature, believe me yours very truly,

(Signed) "THOMAS W. LAWSON."

"There was a new baby at the house where I was at work, and I promised that if I won the $50 he should have $5 of it. So the little fellow will start in life with a bank account."—Mrs. Cooley.

KNOCKED DOWN BY AUTO, WOMAN CLINGS TO CAR AND WINS $50 PRIZE

Mrs. Bertha Cooley Stands Squarely in Path of Machine, Waving Sunday American.

Prize Will Enable Her to Spend a Whole Month's Vacation With Her Little Son.

$100 in Prizes Every Week to Cipher Solvers

Each week the BOSTON AMERICAN gives a reward of $50 to the person who first stops the green auto on the cipher clue found in the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN. Other awards amounting to $50 are offered to those who send in the first correct solutions of the cipher.

Dragging through the mud with a BOSTON AMERICAN clutched in one hand and the other clinging tightly to the mudguard of the "Green Auto," of "The Great Auto Mystery," Mrs. Bertha Cooley of No. 390A Highland avenue, West Somerville, yesterday afternoon captured the $50 prize offered to the first person who stopped the car in Chelsea square.

It was exactly 5:31 o'clock when the green auto from the Corbin Motor Car Company, the virtues of which are extolled by Manager B. F. Blaney at the Motor Mart in Park square, whirled down Everett avenue. G. L. Kimball was at the wheel.

Just at the entrance to the square Mrs. Cooley jumped in front of the auto waving the copy of the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN. She stood directly in front of the machine, which was moving rapidly. She was determined to stop it, even if it ran over her and she did not move as it came within a few feet of her. Fearing she would be run over the driver of the car swerved suddenly to the right. The mudguard struck Mrs. Cooley knocking her down, but she hung to the guard until the auto stopped.

No Room for Doubt

Before she could pick herself up the auto was covered with others, men and women, waving copies of the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN and shouting "Stop!" "Here's the AMERICAN!"

There was absolutely no doubt, however, that Mrs. Cooley had been the first to stop the auto and she was awarded the prize.

Mrs. Cooley is a nurse and sought for and found the advertisement in the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN while attending a patient in Somerville Sunday afternoon.

"I looked all through the paper twice before I found it," she said. "I had about given it up and decided that it had been left out when I saw it. I read the cipher easily and determined to try my luck. My friends all laughed at me but I said I was going to try anyway.

"There was a new baby at the house where I was at work and I promised that if I won the $50 I would give him $5 of it. So the little fellow will start in life with a bank account.

"When I left my home to-day I put on some old clothes. I didn't know but I would get hauled around in a crowd and I intended to be prepared. I don't know whether I really expected to win or not, but I certainly intended to try."

Means Vacation with Son.

"This $50 will do me more good than I can tell you. I have a little son, thirteen years old, at school in Maine. He has all the month of August for vacation and this money will make it possible for me to spend the month with him in Maine."

Mrs. Cooley was somewhat bruised by her fall, but was not seriously hurt.

"My arm is pretty sore," she said, after she had been given a seat in the auto, "but the $50 is good salve. I noticed that Mr. Nisbet, who won last week, said that he had his first auto ride. This is my first one, also."

Naturally there were some disgruntled ones when the prize was awarded to Mrs. Cooley. Everyone thought he or she should have been given the money and several clung to the auto for some distance, insisting that they had won. Others were more fair and declared, as did the occupants of the auto, that Mrs. Cooley was entitled to the award.

CHAPTER XXIV.

Ballara the Dancer.

"BALLARA," the dancer, fresh from European triumphs and hailed as a marvel of the terpsichorean art, was the star of the bill at a big vaudeville house in Boston.

No one knew her nationality—no one cared about it when she danced. Some wondered, some others asked—none was ever answered. She was merely "Ballara," a slight, graceful girl who danced as no one had ever danced before.

She appeared in a kaleidoscopic variety of costumes and gave the dances of different countries. Her feet twinkled as if inspired, her body swayed, at times dreamily, bewitchingly, at other times as if moved by a storm. There was always a smile on her lips—not the usual set smile of women of her profession, but a charming, delightful revelation of white teeth and dimples and red lips.

In her eyes lay her greatest power. Audiences sat under their tantalizing power in awed silence at first, and then gradually were stirred to tumultuous applause. Her hair was almost red, that rich auburn that women rave over and men enthusiastically admire.

Her act ended, usually, with a Spanish dance. For a moment, lightly as a bird, she was poised in the air with her back to her audience, then the body bent and her head nearly touched the footlights.

With her wonderful eyes turned full upon the house and a scarlet rose in her gleaming teeth she paused a moment, then the lithe figure would straighten up, there would come a succession of quick, graceful swirls and "Ballara" was gone.

As a general thing the act stirred an audience to wild outbursts of enthusiasm. She would never dance again, but would reappear time after time to kiss her hands and nod her pretty head to the storm of appreciation.

On a particular evening the house was jammed to the doors, as had been the rule since her appearance, and every one was patiently awaiting the appearance of the star. Davis settled himself in a box with the air of a man who dares anyone to amuse him, but who is not dissatisfied by his surroundings or the world in general. When "Ballara's" name went up there was the usual round of anticipatory applause. Davis smiled a little contemptuously and shrugged his shoulders impatiently at such post-appearance applause. The orchestra played a short prelude, two pages dressed in white satin drew aside a great, black velvet curtain, and behold! Ballara, the dancer!

As Davis looked at the graceful, bewitching little figure dancing before him like a gossamer fairy, his apathy was suddenly aroused to interest. The thought flashed across his mind that the face of the girl was not altogether unfamiliar to him, but where or how he had seen her before he was unable to remember. He mentally made a trip around the world and let his memory stir up faces and places, but the resemblance still eluded him.

The dance ended and Davis wrinkled his brows, puzzled, and still trying to remember.

The orchestra began the staccato accompaniment of the Spanish dance, and "Ballara" flung herself into the wild abandon of a fandango. The lithe body swayed backward and forward to the click of the castanets, and the vast audience bobbed its head and tapped its feet to the music.

Then, with excitement worked up to the highest pitch, the music ceased in a crash of chords, and with a final stamp of the feet, hands on hips and back half turned to the audience, "Ballara" smiled over her shoulder, holding a red rose between her teeth.

In that instant recollection came to Davis. He remembered a photograph, taken in that pose, which he had seen in possession of Willard Culberson. But who was "Ballara"? And why did Culberson——

"By Jove!" he exclaimed aloud, as an astonishing new thought occurred to him. "I know."

ALLIED PRINTING TRADES UNION LABEL COUNCIL BOSTON, MASS. 96

Boston printers are highly pleased with the report from the international office at Indianapolis that the eight-hour strike fund receipts far exceed the outlay. Steamfitters' Union appointed a delegation to attend the public meeting in the Common Council chamber to-morrow night at 7:30 given by the City Council committee of fifteen appointed to investigate municipal lighting throughout the country. A communication from the Albany Steamfitters' Union stated that jurisdictional trouble of interest to the Boston local had been settled in favor of the steamfitters. It was reported that differences existing in a shop in this city had been settled. Business Agent Brophy reported that trade was fair.

BOB FITZSIMMONS'S MOTHER IS DEAD.

NEW YORK, May 8.—Mrs. Jane Fitzsimmons, mother of Bob Fitzsimmons, died last Sunday at her home in Timaru, New Zealand. News of her death reached Fitzsimmons yesterday at the Iroquois Hotel in Plainfield, N. J. The news was unexpected, for, although Mrs. Fitzsimmons had nearly reached the century mark, she was still strong and active. She was the mother of twelve children.

A LETTER TO OUR READERS.

53 Cottage St., Melrose, Mass.

Dear Sir:

"Ever since I was in the Army I had more or less kidney trouble, and within the past year it become so severe and complicated that I suffered everything and was much alarmed—my strength and power was fast leaving me. I saw an advertisement of Swamp-Root, and wrote asking for advice. I began the use of the medicine and noted a decided improvement after taking Swamp-Root only a short time.

I continued its use and am thankful to say that I am entirely cured and strong. In order to be very sure about this, I had a doctor examine some of my water to-day and he pronounced it all right and in splendid condition.

I know that your Swamp-Root is purely vegetable and does not contain any harmful drugs. Thanking you for my complete recovery and recommending Swamp-Root to all sufferers I am,"

Very truly yours,

I. C. RICHARDSON.

You may have a sample bottle of this wonderful remedy, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, sent absolutely free by mail, also a book telling all about Swamp-Root. If you are already convinced that Swamp-Root is what you need, you can purchase the regular fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles at the drug stores everywhere. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

JAIL WOMAN BURGLAR AND HER HUSBAND

Couple Convicted in New Hampshire Court Get Four-Year Terms.

MANCHESTER, N. H., May 8.—In the Superior Court yesterday afternoon Olaf D. Gunerstrom and Halma Gunerstrom, his beautiful wife, were sentenced to not less than four nor more than nine years in State prison for burglarizing the residence of J. Frank Baldwin in January. Five other counts were continued. Both retracted pleas of not guilty.

The charges against the woman were for breaks into the houses of J. F. Baldwin, Lizzie McDonald and Edna B. Huckins, all of which happened within two weeks. When arrested she had jewelry taken from the Baldwin house and a watch stolen at the time of the McDonald break, discovered in a Boston pawnshop, and a ring taken at the Huckins break. Later other stolen goods were found where she had been rooming.

Gunerstrom, who is thirty-five years old, very plain looking and with bow legs, came to Manchester two years ago and obtained employment in Green's shoe shop and has worked steadily since.

Mrs. Gunerstrom, who was formerly Miss Halma Carlson of Boston, worked for a time as a domestic at the home of Dr. W. R. Blackstone, one of the houses burglarized.

GIRL SAYS MAN KEPT RING SHE SENT HIM

NATICK, May 8.—Thomas St. Clair of South Framingham, a collector for a Boston credit house, was arrested yesterday charged with the larceny of a diamond ring valued at $100, the property of Miss Annie Geary, who asserts that she allowed St. Clair to take it a week ago.

$250,000,000 SYNDICATE TO REBUILD FRISCO

Rockefeller and Other Magnates at Meeting to Finance Reconstruction Combine.

NEW YORK, May 8.—Headed by John D. Rockefeller, it is said a number of American multi-millionaires were represented at a meeting of the officers of the United States Realty Company yesterday at which preliminary plans were made to form a gigantic company for the rebuilding of San Francisco.

Among those at the meeting were Senator Francis Newlands of Nevada, who owns a controlling interest in the Palace Hotel; President H. S. Black of the United States Realty and Construction Company, Thomas A. Magee of the San Francisco Relief Fund Finance Committee and Franklin K. Lane of San Francisco. Senator Newlands and Frank A. Vanderlip of the National City Bank represented the Rockefeller interests.

According to the tentative programme, at least $250,000,000 will be subscribed by the backers of the colossal undertaking. As Senator Newlands and his San Francisco confreres admitted, however, the actual sum involved may reach $350,000,000 or $400,000,000 before a new San Francisco rises from the ashes.

Never in the history of this country has such a stupendous enterprise been undertaken by private individuals. That the programme, which embraces practically the entire resurrection of the destroyed area, will be carried out, is assured by the immense wealth and credit of its authors.

Among other persons of great wealth who are interested in the undertaking, and who are expected to back their interest with cash, are D. O. Mills, Edward H. Harriman, Clarence Mackay, the George Crockers, Mrs. Collis P. Huntington, the Frederick Vanderbilts, George, Edwin and Howard Gould, Francis Burton Harrison and nearly every wealthy property owner in the stricken city.

"While our plans to-day began to assume tangible shape," said Senator Newlands, when seen at the National City Bank—the Rockefeller bank—"there are many details yet to be completed. I am prepared to say, however, that vigorous practicable steps are being taken to rebuild the destroyed sections of San Francisco on a more permanent and comprehensive scale than ever before."

$4,000 BALM TO GIRL HE LEFT BEHIND HIM

On With the New Love Before He's Off With the Old, and Must Pay.

AMESBURY, May 8.—Four thousand dollars is the price set by a jury for the loss of the love of Irving N. Chase, who must pay the sum to Miss Helen J. Merrill of Seabrook, N. H. The prominence in the case of an Amesbury girl, Miss Emma J. Hibbs, caused the breach of promise trial in Exeter, N. H., to be followed with intense interest here.

Chase is a member of the firm of Roscoe H. Morrill & Co., and Miss Emma J. Hibbs is employed as bookkeeper at the office of the firm on Main street. Chase came to Amesbury about a year ago, and upon meeting Miss Hibbs his affection for Miss Merrill appears to have waned, and he has been very attentive to the bookkeeper.

When he began to attend services at the Union Congregational Church, where Miss Hibbs is quite active, and wait for her at the close of the service, the gossips began to wag their heads.

Chase still continued to pay attention to his New Hampshire sweetheart, until just before Christmas, when he began to lag in his attentions, and Miss Merril began to suspect that her love affair was not running smoothly, and she left her New Hampshire home and brought suit for $10,000. In speaking of the case to a reporter she said:

"He has abused my sacred trust, and I was determined to avenge it by prosecuting him to the limit."

In telling her story she said:

"When only a mere girl I met him and was attracted by him. That was sixteen years ago, and we have been constantly in each other's company ever since. During all that time we were inseparable—no social function, ball, party or dance was ever attended by either of us alone. We went together, and our engagement was widely known. Why, five years ago I left my folks to go and live with his folks. His parents and mine approved of the engagement, and we were as happy as lovers could be. I lived at his home for three years and ten months. The first of December I left him, returning to live with my parents in Seabrook, and later living with friends in Newburyport."

2 MEN KILLED HACKETT GIRL, SAYS LAWYER

Mrs. Elsie Raymond's Attorney Promises New and Startling Evidence.

LEWISTON, Me., May 8.—New and startling evidence in the case of Mattie Hackett, the pretty Readfield girl who was strangled by a piece of rope, is expected to develop in the near future, according to D. J. McGillicuddy, attorney for Mrs. Elsie Hobbs Raymond, who was acquitted of the crime by the Grand Jury.

Attorney McGillicuddy insists that the murder was done by two men, and that it took place in the house, instead of at the roadside, the woman being taken away by the murderers.

"I have a theory as to who committed the crime," said Mr. McGillicuddy yesterday, "but I cannot divulge the names at this time. I can say that in the near future the whole State will be startled by some most surprising developments in the case."

The action of the Grand Jury is taken by Mrs. Raymond's friends to be suggestive in many ways. Most important of all is the fact that it is an easy matter to cast suspicion of crime upon any person.

It is contended by her supporters that the persons who have made these charges against her have by the Grand Jury's action in refusing an indictment escaped a cross-examination that would have shown them up in anything but an enviable light.

Attorney McGillicuddy, in speaking of the case, says:

"The connecting of Elsie Raymond's name with this murder is a monstrous outrage. We have had just such cases of official incapacity in this State before. The case of Stain and Cromwell here comes to mind. I almost regret that the jury had not let the case go to trial, as we would then have had a chance to show up the iniquity of this whole affair.

"Elsie Raymond is as innocent of that crime as you or I, and we could easily have shown this fact. Even as it is, the failure of the charge before the Grand Jury, is enough to satisfy any person of Mrs. Raymond's innocence. The whole case should be a warning to officers to be more careful how they bandy the names of innocent people in connection with murder."

NEWSPAPER PLAY HAS THE ATMOSPHERE

Nothing that could have been written to show how greatly the American newspaper life interests the public could more positively prove it than the new play which Henry W. Savage offered Bostonians at the Tremont Theatre last evening—Jesse Lynch Williams's "The Stolen Story." The theatre was packed, literally "jammed," and there were hundreds of newspaper men who came to see how closely the atmosphere could be given on the stage. The atmosphere was there all right, through two long, strenuous, exciting, interesting, fascinating, true-to-life acts. It is a newspaper play. The hero is a "mere reporter" whom his sweetheart (bless her) declared was as good as a mere millionaire. The plot is about a newspaper story, and the chief scenes occur in a newspaper office.

As a realistic scene, this of the newspaper office is perfect. The illusion is all there, even to the office devil, the terse city editor, the reporters and their excuses for "why they didn't get it." There is a refreshing air of realism about all the pseudo newspaper men, too, except that of Billy Woods, the hero of the story. Jameson Lee Finney makes of him rather a stagey sort of fellow—clever, forceful, manly, likeable, to be sure—but still stagey and with some mannerisms that do not seem to fit. Only in the first part of the first act and in the last act does he measure up to the role. Then he is delightful.

No one last evening knew whether Edwin Holt had ever actually been city editor of a newspaper like—well, like the BOSTON AMERICAN—but he must have been or else he wouldn't have got it all down so fine. His city editor in this play is a picture worth seeing if you want to know what a city editor acts and looks like, for he is one to the life. And so of all the other reporters and newspaper men. There were a few there who were speaking likenesses of some local newspaper hustlers. Joseph M. Sparks has a particularly genial part as the Irish politician who won't be honest because there isn't enough in it for him, and R. Peyton Carter plays the old general, the amateur politician, to the life. There are only three prominent feminine roles, that of Frances Cunningham—convincingly, adequately and interestingly played by Dorothy Tennant, that of Miss Dares, the society reporter, played by Fanny Marinoff with considerable understanding, and that of Mrs. Metcalf, played by Marion Abbott.

Rarely has an audience shown better its appreciation of the snap, life, bustle and general excitement of the play. It is full of go. It is just like newspaper life transplanted to the stage. The audience liked it. They applauded for many minutes after each act ended, forcing curtain call after curtain call, and then at the close stood in their places and clapped and cheered and yelled "brava" until the lights were turned out. "The Stolen Story" is, without reservation, the most interesting play brought to Boston this season. It is the most deserving, for it certainly "delivers the goods." It has human interest, a clean cut plot, a good love story and a vital, human, lovable, manly, active fellow for a hero, a man who does things, and these are the kind that American audiences like to see on the stage. It is a decided relief from the slipshod, half-baked conglomerations of waste basket material that have been foisted upon Boston this season.

NEW EMPIRE STOCK GETS BIG RECEPTION

Great!

That was the opinion of a crowded house last night, after witnessing the initial performance of the new Empire Theatre stock company in David Belasco's four-act drama, "Men and Women." The opinion was well deserved. The theatre was packed and everyone went away happy. The company is one of the strongest that has ever appeared at the theatre. It is exceptionally well balanced. Katherine Grey, until recently with the Frohman companies, made an instantaneous hit in the role of Agnes Rodman. She won the hearts of all by her gracefulness, clever acting and pleasing personality.

Next to her, the honors went to William Evarts, of the more recent Empire company. The ever-merry Mary Sanders, of the less recent Empire company, received a strenuous welcome. William Humphrey, in the "heavy" role, gave a very finished performance, while Harry Burkhardt, the new leading man, created a favorable impression. Bertram Yost had the house in roars of laughter.

Bertha Knatwold and Lillian Bayer, both of the more recent Empire company, were as delightful as ever. Miss Bayer's laugh is wholesome and infectious. Both received large quantities of flowers. The work of Frank Peters as Rodman, reformed bank defaulter, was of a high order.

Others in the company, all of whom did well, were William Lamp, George de Carleton, E. W. Morison, Edward Neff, William Mason, Joseph Sullivan, Edward Graham, Violet Vernon, Cordelia Macdonald and Edwina Booth. The settings were very elaborate and tasteful, for stage manager Frederic Sullivan remains with the new company.

NEW WAR DRAMA HAS MANY THRILLS

Harry Clay Blaney's new war drama, "The Boy Behind the Gun," which opened at the Grand Opera House last night for a week's run, and incidentally the closing attraction of the season there, is a stirring melodrama of the "thriller" sort. It deals with the incidents of the Russian-Japanese war, the climax showing in terrible and sensational detail the fight in the Sea of Japan from the deck of Togo's flagship. Five big Gatling guns are used to give realism to the picture, and enough powder to sink a battleship, it seems. The story is mightily interesting, vividly told and well acted. There are plenty of songs, military drills and a number of dances. A band of Royal Guards of Japan and twenty Geisha girls are included in the cast, but, of course, Harry Clay Blaney as "Willie Live" is the main show. Matinees will be given to-day, Thursday and Saturday.

Austin & Stone's Museum

One of the best features at Austin & Stone's yesterday was Effie Lorraine and M. Bellyea's trunk act. Mlle. Lorraine, placed in a box which is enclosed in a trunk and the whole sealed and padlocked in a wooden crate, made her escape yesterday in twenty-six seconds one time, in thirty seconds in another. The trick bears did some really human-like acts. St. Julian in his "upside down" act; Banjo, the biggest and handsomest bull in the world; The German Rose, a musical maid; were among the other attractions.

Lyceum Theatre

"Wine, Women and Song" at the Lyceum Theatre this week is an offering unusual among burlesque organizations. The two new burlesques, "A Day at Niagara Falls" and "Fun in the Subway," are of such an entertaining character that improvement seems impossible. The olio consisted of Bonita and her Cuban and African midgets; Howe and Scott, Hebrew comedians; Frederick brothers and Burns, comedy musical act; Raymond and Clayton,

Bowdoin Square Theatre

"Shadows of Night," a strong melodrama, with Charlotte Hunt in the leading role, packed the Bowdoin Square Theatre to the doors at two performances yesterday. Its situations are striking, and include a railway station, an old sluiceway filled with running water, a police headquarters scene that is vividly realistic.

FEATS OF SECOND SIGHT BY FAYS MYSTIFY AUDIENCE

HALL PHOTOS

Miss Eva Fay - at the Globe.

An Inexplicable Mind-Reading Performance at Globe Theatre.

The Fays at the Globe Theatre have several hundred Boston people greatly puzzled by their mysterious "Thaumaturgy."

The Fays are John T. and Mrs. Eva Fay. The "subject," as one says in speaking of these occult demonstrations, is Eva Fay, a charming looking woman, who seems to possess a marvellous power of second sight or telepathy or something akin to that singular gift.

"Thaumaturgy" is the act of doing something wonderful, according to the dictionary, and at the opening performance of the Fays last night the name they have given to their show seemed especially appropriate.

The performance is in three parts. In the first Mrs. Fay gives a demonstration of spiritualistic cabinet work, causing banjos to be played, bells to be rung and other odd tricks to be performed in the cabinet within which she is securely tied.

An interval of vaudeville follows and the show closes with the principal thaumaturgy demonstration in which Mrs. Fay answers questions which the audience has written and kept carefully to themselves.

In the presence of a committee of two volunteers from the audience Mrs. Fay was securely bound, her hands being tied behind her back and the fastenings securely locked with court-plaster. Then Mrs. Fay was seated, her bound hands were fastened to the back of her chair and a cabinet was put about her, with musical instruments placed in her lap. Instantly the musical instruments gave forth sound and then were hurled through the opening in the cabinet curtain. Then a smaller cabinet was placed about her, covering all except the head. With amazing speed Mrs. Fay freed herself from the fastenings which bound her hands.

In the final and principal act, Mrs. Fay answered questions. Every one in the audience who wished had written questions on a paper, and then carefully kept the paper in his or her pocket. Mrs. Fay had, so far as could be seen, absolutely no prearranged knowledge of the people or questions.

She came out—was covered with a big cloth—and began without delay to call the names of people in the house. As an example, she would call out:

"Is J. G. Smith here—J. G. Smith?"

Then Mrs. Fay would ask Mr. Smith to declare himself. Some refused to do so, evidently from timidity or bashfulness, but many did, to the number of fifty or more. Mrs. Fay would then answer the question, though it was a puzzle to the audience how she knew what the question was at all.

These queries covered a wide range. Most of them were very personal, relating to home or business affairs, with which Mrs. Fay could hardly have been acquainted.

A great majority declared that their questions had been clearly divined by Mrs. Fay and that the answers were remarkably appropriate.

A few examples of coin reading and similar second sight acts closed a show that was interesting from start to finish.

The management announces that there will be matinees on Thursday and Friday for men only.

HIPPODROME AT BOSTON THEATRE

Thompson & Dundy's "A Yankee Circus on Mars," which is presented every afternoon and evening at the Boston Theatre, is doing something of a record-breaking business at the noble old playhouse. Yesterday afternoon it entered upon the second week of its engagement and met with the same degree of approval and enthusiasm as heretofore. The big spectacle—musical comedy, light opera, circus, grand opera—has scored an unqualified success, both artistically and financially. Mlle. Claire Heliot's marvellous performance with her lions; the ponies' tricks and the wonderful leaps of the Russian boarhounds over banners and horses and through hoops—a newly-added feature, presented for the first time in Boston yesterday—are a constant source of amazement.

CUNNING SURPRISES COLUMBIA AUDIENCE

A more surprised lot of individuals than the crowds that witnessed the exhibition of Cunning at the Columbia yesterday never assembled inside the playhouse. He did wonders with handcuffs, iron cages and other devices used by officers of the law to hold criminals captive, but the feat of all feats was where he was bound in a strait-jacket and escaped in full view of everyone. He has accepted many challenges, one of which is to escape from a cell in a local station house or the Charles Street Jail, the date to be announced. The Utopians are also seen in two able burlettas. Miss Beatrice Harlowe was the big applause winner.

Palace Theatre

The Bowery Sports burlesquers present a bright and entertaining bill at the Palace Theatre in "A High Old Time," and "The Toreador," both of which are full of good comedy, entertaining specialties and excellent musical numbers. The olio presents the DeElkar brothers, comedy acrobats; Williams and Alecne, Phil Staats, trick pianist, and Howard & Colby, illustrated songs, and the Palacescope.

DIXEY BEGINS HIS LAST WEEK

Last night at the Majestic Theatre Henry E. Dixey entered upon the last week of his Boston engagement in that delightful book play, "The Man on the Box." Throughout the piece Mr. Dixey is given opportunities for the display of his talents as a light comedian, and that he takes advantage of them goes without saying, for in this particular line there is no better actor on the American stage to-day. Miss Marie Nordstrom, Sidney Booth, Oliver Doud Byron and James Bliss are among the players who support Mr. Dixey.

Two Letters That Tell the Truth

International Paper Company
30 Broad Street
New York March 20th, 1906.

William Randolph Hearst, Esq.,
NEW YORK CITY.

Dear Sir:-

During the calendar year 1905 the INTERNATIONAL PAPER COMPANY delivered to the HEARST NEWSPAPERS at New York, Chicago and Boston, ONE HUNDRED AND SIXTY-FIVE MILLION, THREE HUNDRED AND FIVE THOUSAND, FOUR HUNDRED AND FIFTY-FOUR POUNDS (165,305,454 POUNDS) of News Print Paper, making an average delivery of TWO HUNDRED AND EIGHTY-EIGHT TONS (288 TONS) per working day.

Yours truly,
INTERNATIONAL PAPER COMPANY,
Manager News Division.
Certified by:
Accountant.

IT took in the year 1905
184 MILLION
732 THOUSAND
968
(184,732,968)
pounds of white paper to print the Hearst Newspapers in New York, Boston, Chicago, San Francisco and Los Angeles.

One pound of white paper is sufficient to print SIX COPIES of a newspaper the size of the Magazine Section of the Hearst Sunday Newspapers.

The quantity of paper consumed would produce in one year
ONE BILLION, ONE HUNDRED EIGHT MILLION, THREE HUNDRED NINETY-SEVEN THOUSAND, EIGHT HUNDRED EIGHT (1,108,397,808) twelve page papers, or an average of over
THREE MILLION (3,000,000) twelve page papers every day in the year.

Allowing for the pages issued in excess of twelve by all of the Hearst Newspapers on Sunday, and very frequently during the week, the white paper used produces an average daily circulation, for every week day and every Sunday in the year, considerably in excess of TWO MILLION (2,000,000) sold copies—

Who Will Say the Hearst Newspapers Do Not Reach the People?

When you stop to consider that the white paper used in a year equals NINETY-TWO THOUSAND, THREE HUNDRED SEVENTY-SIX (92,376) TONS, which fills FOUR THOUSAND, SIX HUNDRED EIGHTEEN (4,618) freight cars, you can get some idea of the magnitude of the Hearst organization—its power, its influence, its ability to make any advertiser rich who uses the Hearst Newspapers intelligently, honestly and persistently.

NANCE O'NEIL IS WELCOMED IN IBSEN PLAY

Boston, which discovered Nance O'Neil, gave her an enthusiastic welcome last evening after her trip to the antipodes. The Hollis Street Theatre was filled to overflowing and there was no question as to the generosity of her greeting.

Both play and company are new to this city. "Rosmersholm" has not been seen before in Boston. It has been called by some Ibsen's masterpiece. This will hardly seem truth to most of those who have judged the realist by "Ghosts" and "Hedda Gabler." But in presenting it Miss O'Neil has added to the novelty of the dramatic season. The role of Rebecca West in the play will not stand as one of Nance O'Neil's best. It does not give her the opportunities of many of her former characters. That she makes of it a virile, fairly real person; that she succeeds in swaying the audience with thrills, if not with sympathy, is much to her credit, for it is a thankless part.

The company is the best this star has had since success first came to her. The parts in an Ibsen play call for fine character work. Without exception, they are admirably played by this cast. The Rector Kroll of George Marjeroni is dark-eyed and fanatical without being overdrawn. The John Rosmer of Andrew Robson is earnest and convincing. The Brendel and Mortensgard of Lawrence Griffiths and Paul Scardin are sharply drawn in character. The Mme. Helseth of Clara Thompson is roundly filled. Few people will remember Miss O'Neil's "Rosmersholm" as they will her "Judith" or her "Elizabeth." She is, nevertheless, to be thanked for giving Boston the opportunity to see a seldom-presented play, artistically put on.

KIPLING PLAY IS BEST OF SEASON

A stock actor may have in all the year but one role, which stands out above all the rest as his best piece of work, the one which he made the most realistic, in which he created the most perfect illusion, in which he was most sincere. Howell Hansel has undoubtedly the most satisfactory role of his career as Dick Heldar in Kipling's "The Light That Failed," this week's bill at the Castle Square. He plays it so vividly, with such perfect control and so sanely that he grips the heartstrings of even the oldest of theatregoers. It is a "teary" play, in any case, but rarely is a play sent across the footlights so convincingly.

In "The Light That Failed" another unusual thing is noticed. Every member of the cast, both male and female, seems to feel the true spirit and they make each moment tell. Miss Kemble puts her soul into the role of Masie so fully that she sheds very moist tears, and Miss Marcelli has a perfect conception of the role of the red-haired girl who loves and sacrifices. Elfrida Lasche, a newcomer from uptown, played Bessie Broke with just the touch of humanness necessary. In fact, she was like all the rest—perfect. John Waldron has never done better than as Torpenhow.

Howard Athenaeum

High-class vaudeville is the feature at the Old Howard this week. Ziska and King, funny conjurors, head the bill, with Carron and Farnum, the acrobats. Then come Halley and Meehan, in blackface; Kenny and Mollis, with illustrated songs; Harbach and Harris, Houtin and Tillson; the Zarnos, Johnny Farrell, Goodrich and Drew, Marron and Marron, the Joyse Pair and the Howardscope. The burlesque company offers its newest songfest, "Safe Hits," with George B. Alexander and Fay Nagin.

SPECIAL NOTICE.
SUMMER ATHLETICS CAUSE
Stiff, sore muscles. Minard's Liniment applied at night corrects it by morning.

NETHERSOLE AS 'MAGDA'

"Magda," Suderman's great three-act play, was chosen by Miss Olga Nethersole for the opening of her second week's engagement at the Colonial Theatre, and if real, simon-pure applause, which at the curtain of the second act amounted to fervor, means anything, then the large audience which saw the play and Miss Nethersole were indeed thankful to her that her selection was "Magda."

Miss Nethersole in the name role rose to the heights of the part in every particular. It is just one of those characters in which she revels, and one in which it would be hard indeed to find her equal on the American stage. And when this is said even Mrs. Carter is remembered. Her supporting company was in the main, very good. Hubert Carter as the man was just what was expected, while Warren Farren, Jr., as the father was as stern and demanding as any other father who would drive his daughter from his home and then attempt to kill her because she disobeyed him in a matter of so vital importance as the choosing of a husband.

The repertoire for the balance of the week has been changed, owing to the great demand for "Sapho," and is here given: To-night, "Carmen"; Wednesday matinee, "Sapho"; Wednesday night, "The Second Mrs. Tanqueray"; Thursday night, "Sapho"; Friday night, "Sapho"; Saturday matinee and night, "Sapho."

GREAT VARIETY IN KEITH BILL

Keith's presents a bill this week to suit all tastes. There are clever acts and sketches, dialogue of every variety, trained dogs and ponies, and in fact everything to make up a good entertainment. Creatore and his band, assisted by Signor Pesce, harpist, is one of the big features of the bill. His selections were encored time and again, especially the playing of "The American Patrol." It is noticeable that Creatore has omitted much of the strenuosity which he exhibited some years ago when leading his band, but at times he all but worked into his old habits.

Some excellent photographs of San Francisco, taken after the recent earthquake, are given on the kinetograph. Frank Bush, the Hebrew story teller and mimic, is better than ever. Leon Morris's trained ponies, dogs and a bear add a tint of the one-ring circus to the show, one that is certainly highly amusing to the children, as well as the older folks.

The Max Welson troupe of rope performers is exceedingly clever, as well as Irving Jones, in a colored comedy sketch, Harry Antrim and Yetta Peters, the Doris trio and others.

Stung again. But the great Rube is out of the way for a while and there is some hope that Collins and his men will get a move on.

No toothpick hitting will ever make the least impression on Connie Mack's Elephants, who are traveling at the head of the brigade just now and feeling their oats.

It's certainly sad to start the week with a reverse, but the fortunes of war point to a different story to-day, with his Rubelets sitting on the bench.

The odds should be on the home team, as Cy Young or Tannehill will do the twirling and either one of these vets should get away with any of the Athletics' curving force.

Like many other great battles which he has figured in, Rube Waddell was the chief feature in the first game of the series of the Athletics' season debut.

The great southpaw was running as smooth as when he pitched that great game against Cy Young last Summer and he went about his job with his characteristic snap.

All the local batters with the exception of Chick Stahl found him too much for their batting eyes and he had them nailed to the mast.

The Rube allowed just six hits and fanned every man on the team but Stahl, Collins and Grimshaw. Only two of the Pilgrims got as far as third base, but in each case two were out and there was never a glimpse of a run.

It was the same old trick the Rube has of rubbing it into the Collinsites and he was determined to shut his opponents out and he was right there with the goods.

George Winter was not the easiest proposition for the Athletics, but they landed on him at the right time. Two of the three passes he issued scored runs and a couple of three baggers were responsible for two of the quartette of tallies that the Quakers got.

The Athletics looked safe in the first inning till Winter passed Armbruster. Then Davis cracked one on the ground straight at Grimshaw. The awkward first sacker slid in the mud and the ball went by him like a shot and an easy chance was lost. Ferris picked the ball up and drove it to Collins to catch Armbruster, who was legging it to the third station. Hobe miscued and Collins only got the tip of his fingers on the leather, while Armbruster kept on to the plate.

In the fourth Davis smashed between Collins and Parent. Socks Seybold put one on the right foul line out by the bleachers. It was good for three bases, scoring Davis. Collins put up a vigorous kick, claiming that Umpire Sheridan should have called it foul, but the protest didn't go.

Waddell got a transfer in the fifth. Topsy Hartsell laid down a beautiful bunt and Armbruster slammed to centre, scoring the Rube from second.

Murphy's triple to right in the sixth paved the way for a run. Cross fanned, but Ossie Schreck was on tap with a nice single to left, putting Dan across the pan.

NOTES OF THE GAME.

Nothing bothered the Rube.

Good weather to-day and a better change all round.

The Athletics don't look as strong as last year. But they can play the game a bit.

Chick Stahl got to base every time up. Chick is putting the wood to the ball the way the fans like to hear it.

Parent and Ferris had lots of fun with Waddell when the Rube reached second. The pitcher took lots of room, but was not to be caught napping.

Ferris covered acres of ground, as usual. His catch of a foul on the right foul line was his best effort.

"Hire a boy!" yelled a fan when Sheridan was chasing to the bench after extra balls. He got plenty of exercise as the pellets were fouled in every direction.

The Rube stopped some hot shot and his fingers suffered. He got burned a couple of times, but it was his glove hand. He knew enough to keep his twirler out of reach.

HYLAND AT CHELSEA.

Dick Hyland, the fighting wonder from California, is coming here just as fast as he can and is booked for the Lincoln Club. His opponent will probably be Charley Neary, and there is talk of the bout being held a week from Thursday, May 18, or possibly Friday, May 19. The date is still in doubt and there is a chance that May 21, three weeks from last night, will be chosen.

TO MEET AT BROOKLINE.

The executive committee of the New England Intercollegiate Athletic Association voted yesterday to hold the annual track and field meet at the field of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology at Brookline instead of at Worcester, as was decided at the annual meeting of the association last February. The dates of the meet, May 18 and 19, remain unchanged.

HARVARD LACROSSE.

C. E. Marsters, '07, and J. S. Irving, '05, of Harvard, have been elected captains of their class lacrosse teams.

SMITH VS. KLUCKEN.

Campbell was an easy victor over Maynard in the New England Class C billiard match played at the Hub Billiard Palace, the score being 150 to 96. Campbell averaged 1 50-94 and made a high run of 13, while the defeated player averaged 1 2-95 and only had 6 for a best run. Smith will cross cues with Klucken this evening.

Special to the Boston American.

PHILADELPHIA, May 8.—Manager Fred Tenney of the Boston Nationals has carded Lindaman to face the Quakers this afternoon in the second game between the two teams. Manager Duffy has carded Pittenger to do the box work.

The Bostons were beaten in the opening game yesterday, 3 to 2, owing to the extreme generosity of Pitcher Pfeffer, who distributed passes to the Philadelphia players a la carte. Seven transport tickets were issued to the locals, and were mainly responsible for their three runs.

The Philadelphias were only able to touch up the visiting twirler for seven hits, most of their batting being done in the fourth inning. The Bostons were not able to do much with Duggleby's delivery, and only tallied when Kid Gleason paved the way for their two runs by a rank error.

NEW N. C. A. OFFICIAL.

Coleman McGowan Put Iver Benson Away in Two Rounds in N. E. Championships

KNOCKOUT AT THE AMATEUR BOUTS

The New England amateur boxing championships drew 1,500 fans to Mechanics' building last night and medals in six classes were awarded.

It was a big card of sport that was handled, as no less than twenty-five bouts were necessary on account of the large entry list.

But the officials were up in their business and the last mill was over at a seasonable hour.

The winners were: 105-pound class, Angus McDougal, South Boston; 115-pound class, John Stanton, South Boston; 125-pound class, T. F. Fitzpatrick, South Boston; 135-pound class, Coleman McGowan, South Boston; 145-pound class, J. J. Collins, Roxbury; 158-pound class, H. J. Powers, Cambridge; heavyweight class, Fred Bradley, Roxbury.

Most of the winners have stood prominently in the amateur ranks, winning matches in the B. A. A. amateur tournaments, and those with the longer experience came out on top.

There were no surprises in the ranks, as the boys who secured the medals have captured prizes in competition elsewhere, and their proficiency in the game pulled them out ahead of the unheard-of material.

One of the best performers was J. J. Collins of Roxbury, who went through the 145-pound class like a whirlwind. He beat out a big strong boy in his preliminary in less than a round, and put his opponent away in the final bout before they had travelled the full opening round.

His slashing style caught the crowd. He waded in at the bell and never gave the other fellow a chance, but let go right and left and won in jig time.

Hugh McKinnon, the national champion of 1905, was unable to compete on account of an injured hand, and his absence in the 145-pound class left the result in more doubt.

There were five steppers in the bantam class, with Angus McDougal the pick of the field. He took the measure of Robert Gannon of South Boston in one round. William Cuzzy of Watertown got away with his trial with Harry Royen of Boston in one session. John Rothwell of East Boston drew the bye and met McDougal in the semi-final. The Noddle Island scrapper made McDougal travel the whole of three rounds, but lost the decision.

McDougal was all over Cuzzy in the last bout, but the latter was game and took a beating.

James Inman of Cambridge won in a round from Michael Glover of South Boston in the prelim, but he was no match for John Stanton, whom he met in the semi-final. Amos White, the little Newton fighter, put T. J. Sullivan of South Boston to the bad in two rounds and faced Stanton for final honors. Stanton's superior cleverness won him the decision, but White kept with him at every stride.

There was more class among the 125-pound boys, as "Mexie" Fitzpatrick of South Boston, a championship winner, was entered. He met a tough customer in A. G. Dixon of Roxbury in the semi-finals, whose good left bothered him. Tommy Rawson, who represented Boston in the National bouts at San Francisco, was picked with him to decide the medals.

Rawson wore the trunks with the Olympic Club insignia similar to those worn by Jimmy Britt, and he looked every inch a fighting machine.

N. E. AMATEUR BOXING CHAMPS

105-lb. class—Angus McDougal, South Boston.
115-lb. class—John Stanton, Shawmut Rowing Club, South Boston.
125-lb. class—T. F. Fitzpatrick, South Boston.
135-lb. class—Coleman F. McGowan, South Boston.
145-lb. class—J. J. Collins, Roxbury.
158-lb. class—H. J. Powers, Riverside Boat Club, Cambridge.
Heavyweight class—Fred Bradley, Roxbury.

They went along at an even clip for two rounds, countering nicely with lefts and breaking even on leads.

In the last round Fitz scored a knockdown, landing his right to the head. This counted for him when the judges swayed the decision in his favor, as Rawson gave him an interesting tussle to the final bell.

Iver Benson, the rugged little Swede from Waltham, made a hit in the 135-pound class, as he caused the first boy he met to quit in a round. He found a stronger argument when he stacked up with William Mahoney of South Boston, the winner to qualify for the final to meet Coleman McGowan of South Boston, who had also done away with his antagonist in the same short distance.

Benson was one of those awkward punchers who depended on his strength to bore in and wallop to beat down his enemy. He nearly had his left eye closed by Mahoney, who weakened under Benson's body pounding and lost.

McGowan had two clever hands, but he could not get in any effective work against Benson in the first round. In the second he fastened on a right to the jaw, and followed it up quick with another and Benson went down and out.

H. J. Powers of the Riverside Boat Club, Cambridge, showed up best in the 158-pound class. He put James Mullally of Cambridge on the mat in the second round and then tackled a big, rawbone boxer in H. J. Flynn from the West End. Flynn made a good impression for a round and then his light went out as Powers reached him in the second and he passed up his chips.

Only one bout materialized in the heavyweight class, and the pair were Fred Bradley of Roxbury, scaling 173½ pounds, and Charles Stewart of Boston, who had 180 pounds.

Bradley was the aggressor from the start and cut out the business. In the second he closed in and got to Stewart with his powerful swings and made him acknowledge defeat.

The judges were Neil Doherty of the B. A. A. and M. F. Winston, N. E. A. A. U. Referee, Peter Kelley; timers, Alfred Lill and Hugh McGrath; clerk, Ben Osthues; manager, George Brown, B. A. A. The summaries:

105-Pound Class—Angus McDougal, South Boston, beat Robert Gannons, South Boston, one round; William Cuzzy, Watertown, beat Harry Royens, Boston, one round. Semi-final round—Angus McDougal beat John Rothwell, East Boston, three rounds. Final bout—Angus McDougal, South Boston (104½), beat W. F. Cuzzy, Watertown (102).

158-Pound Class—H. J. Powers, Riverside Boat Club, beat James Mullally, Cambridge, two rounds. Final bout—H. J. Powers, Riverside Boat Club (153), beat H. J. Flynn, West End (156¾), two and one-half rounds.

Heavyweight Class (final round)—Fred Bradley (173½ pounds), Roxbury, beat Charles Stewart, Boston (180), two rounds.

MATTY BALDWIN IS FIT FOR GOODMAN

That Matty Baldwin is surely on the road to championship honors was pretty plainly demonstrated at Philadelphia last Saturday when he completely smothered the clever Eddie Lenny in a six-round contest.

Kid Goodman, who faces Baldwin at Chelsea Wednesday night, has met Lenny twice in the roped arena, in Boston, and a draw was the result on both occasions when the bout ended.

Since he has gone under the clever management of Johnny Mack, the Charlestown lad has made rapid strides toward the championship. He is cleverer and faster on his feet, uses his left hand much better, and has got speedy in every department which is necessary to a successful boxer. Some of the best judges in the game do not hesitate to class him with McGovern, Nelson or any other lad in the business at his weight.

Matty says that he will whip Goodman to-morrow night much quicker than he did the last time. He says he had the battle won up to the tenth round, and, not desiring to take a chance of losing, he was too careful in the final rounds. He knows now that he is master of the Ghetto Champion, and says that he will stop Goodman long before the call of time for the final round. Anyway, there is an element of doubt in the contest which will make it interesting to the sports hereabouts, and it would be no surprise if one of the most furious bouts ever decided in Chelsea resulted.

An interesting feature in connection with the Goodman-Baldwin match is that the bout will be refereed by Hector McInnis of South Boston. Goodman has conceded this point, and as Hector has always been fair in his verdicts it means that both boys will get a "square deal."

KID HERMAN IS PUBLIC CHOICE

LOS ANGELES, May 8.—With but a few days in which to finish their work, Kid Herman of Chicago and Abe Attell of San Francisco are straining every muscle to get in the best possible shape for their battle, which takes place before the Pacific Athletic Club of this city Friday night.

Though the horror of the Frisco earthquake is still fresh in their minds, local fight fans are taking a great interest in this bout, and Matchmaker McCarey declares he will almost pack the house.

Betting on the result of the contest, though light, shows that Kid Herman is the public choice. This is due, perhaps, to his good showing with Eddie Hanlon and Aurelio Herrera. While his exhibition battle with Attell here is not to be taken account of in judging the ability of the two men, local fans who witnessed the contest declare that the Chicago boy is every bit as clever as Attell.

Herman Has the Wallop.

It must be admitted that Herman has the stronger wallop of the two, and that there is a fair chance of his putting Attell away. Should Attell, however, fail before Herman, it will not be in the early stages of the game, for Attell's shiftiness will aid him greatly in staying away from his opponent.

Though Herman is the favorite, it must not be understood that Attell is not in the running. In Attell, Herman meets perhaps the hardest man he will ever be asked to step into the ring with. That he can beat Britt seems to be the general opinion here, and that he has more than a fighting chance with the Dane is also the belief, yet there are hundreds here who do not look at this battle as a cinch for the Kid.

It can be said, however, regardless as to who the victor will be, that the battle will be the greatest in the history of ring contests the West has ever seen.

Says He Feels Right.

Herman, who is training out at Rice's Bohemia cottage, on the Mission road, put in a hard day's work yesterday. After a long run on the road he punched the bag, wrestled, jumped the rope and boxed three four-round bouts with his sparring partners, of which he has three.

He declares he never felt better in all his life, and this statement is borne out by the way he works. It seems as though he is getting cleverer every day. He is already down to 128 pounds.

Attell, who is working with his brother Monte, and three other sparring partners, is also in the pink of condition. Attell feels confident that he can beat Herman, and declares he will take all the Herman money in sight the night of the battle.

Attell is working hard developing a punch in the hope that he will score a knockout. This is hardly possible, since his record shows he is lacking in his ability to land the sleep producer.

MOTORIST SARTOU MAY USE DOMESTIC CAR IN BIG RACE

BY J. C. KERRISON.

Rumor comes from New York city that Paul Sartori, the man who drove for Vanderbilt so long, and who was one of the members of the Italian team in the last Vanderbilt race, is to transfer his affections from a foreign to a domestic car. The belief is that in the coming Long Island contest he will be found seated at the wheel of one of the big Matherson cars. In the last race these particular cars were decidedly handicapped by being over weight in the first place and then coming to the race direct from the factory without having received any previous workouts. This experience will not be repeated during the coming season. The racing machines are already under construction and will be ready for their trial at least a month before the date for the holding of the trials. The securing of Sartori as a driver of one of the cars means considerable in the way of experience, which counts so much in a long distance race such as this.

Joe Tracy, the man who drove the Locomobile to third position in the last Vanderbilt race, is to again get into the racing game. Efforts are being made to induce him to drive one of the B.-L.-M. cars in the coming Vanderbilt. Dr. Thokas of Chicago may, however, determine to enter this year's race, and if he does there is no question but what Tracy will drive his machine.

Mr. James Couzens, sales manager of the Ford Motor Car Company, was in Boston yesterday, looking over the local field. He is on a tour of inspection of the Ford agencies and expressed himself as well pleased with the manner in which Manager Charles E. Fay is conducting affairs at this end of the route. Mr. Couzens spent some time in New York city on his way to Boston, and from here went to Buffalo. Throughout the country he finds a healthy demand for the six and four-cylinder cars of his make, and gave the interesting information that within a few weeks the factory will be delivering an increased number of cars.

About the happiest man in town these days is J. C. O'Brien, one of the most popular members of the Bay State Association. He yesterday received his forty-five-horsepower Stearns. This car is one of the largest to be found in this city. It is strikingly finished in red, with lots of foot room in the tonneau, which seats five persons. This morning he started on a run to New York city. This is the car Mr. O'Brien will use in all the tours of note during the present season.

The Illinois Superior Court has been asked by the Chicago Automobile Dealers' Association to enjoin the city from enforcing the ordinances passed in 1904 to regulate the speed of the automobiles and compel the owners to take out licenses and to display numbers on the machines. It is contended that the ordinances are unjust, unreasonable and oppressive, and that they are class legislation, because they exempt owners and users of other kinds of vehicles.

SCHOOLS RACE ON MAY 16

The management of Stone and Volkmann schools has decided to postpone the four-oared boat race which is scheduled for next Friday afternoon on the Charles river to Wednesday, May 16, at 3:30 o'clock. It will be rowed up stream with the tide, as both Captains Wheeler and Shepard thought it would be too much to ask their crews to row against the tide.

ARMOUR WON'T LEAVE TIGERS

DETROIT, May 7.—"I will continue to be manager of the Detroit American League club," said William A. Armour to-day in an interview at Cleveland.

Mr. Armour had tendered his resignation because of a dispute at Bennett Park on Saturday, when he called the game with the St. Louis team in the last half of the ninth, so both teams could catch a train for St. Louis. After Umpire Connolly had announced that the game had been called, upon instructions from both Manager Armour and Manager McAleer, of the St. Louis club, the crowd made a wild demonstration. The score was a tie. Secretary Navin, of Detroit, created a scene with Armour over the manager's action.

Count the Blessings and Be Quick to Forget Your Woes

By Beatrice Fairfax

DON'T think, that you are the only one in the world with troubles to bear or that your trouble is worse than that of any one else.

You can't grow to manhood or womanhood without incurring worries and responsibilities.

The children are the only carefree people in the world, and even they have their tiny worries and woes.

The only thing to do is turn a brave face to the world and carry your burden cheerfully.

The less complaint you make the more people will respect you.

When you are moaning over your own particular worry cast your mind about among your friends and see if they each and all have not some burden to carry which is quite as heavy as yours.

How many of them would you care to change places with?

There is no sense in bothering other people with your woes. They will listen for a while but soon they will begin to avoid you.

Also there is no sense in brooding over your misfortunes and thinking yourself the most abused, unlucky person in the world, for you are not.

But if you don't take very good care you will make yourself one of the most miserable through introspection and self-commiseration.

Just try to make up your mind that you are a pretty lucky person after all.

You may have a few sorrows, but haven't you a great many more joys?

The joys usually outbalance the sorrows when it comes to a close comparison.

Just to be alive at this time of year is a great joy in itself.

It's a sad reflection on human nature that we are so much more ready to appreciate our woes than our blessings. We make small thanksgiving for the latter, but, dearie me, what a fuss we make over the former.

From now on let us all try and keep silent on the question of our worries and troubles. If we can't talk about pleasant, happy things, let us at least keep silent.

Remember, you are no worse off than your neighbor. He has his worries, but perhaps he does not talk about them.

Cheerfulness and optimism will help at every turn in life.

Don't forget that "A merry heart goes all the day, your sad tires in a mile-a."

Advice to Anxious Sweethearts

By Beatrice Fairfax

TELL HER PARENTS

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I have been keeping company with a young lady for nearly seven months. During our acquaintance I always met her at the door of her home on account of her father not knowing that she kept company. Last Wednesday evening I met her, and as we stood there who happened along but her father, and he took hold of her arm and led her inside, not even letting her say good-night to me.

To-day I received a letter from her stating that she wished to meet me elsewhere besides the door of her home, which I do not care to do. Kindly advise me whether I should meet her elsewhere or not, for we intend to get engaged in a few months.

E. E. G.

IF you wish to become engaged to her the only way to do is go directly to her father and tell him the truth like a man. I dare say he will give his consent if you tell him you are in earnest. Do not meet her on the sly.

FOOLISH YOUNG PEOPLE

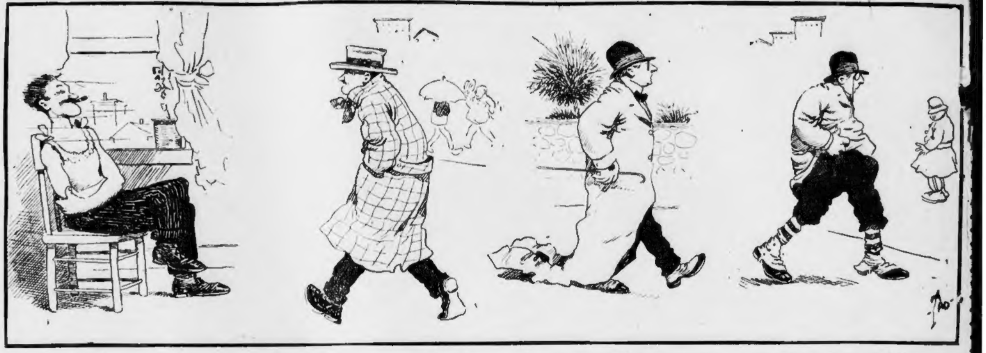
DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am eighteen years old and am acquainted with a gentleman of the same age, and have been going with him for some time. During our acquaintance we have quarreled a few times, but each time made up again. When I go around with him I don't care about him, but when we are angry I feel as though I could not go with any one else. We are angry now, and he is trying to become friends again, but I don't know what to do, as I think we would quarrel again.

A READER.

I THINK you are two foolish young people, and that unless you can get on without quarrelling you had better give each other up. Surely a little self control on both sides would help matters. No love is proof against so many quarrels. If you really care for each other you will try and be more patient.

TAD DEPICTS WHAT WOULD HAPPEN IF MEN DID THE FOOLISH THINGS THAT WOMEN DO



A woman will sit in a draught in a low-neck gown with her arms and shoulders bare.

But she will go out on the hottest afternoon with her head and neck tied up in a thick chiffon veil.

She will wear a skirt about a foot longer than it ought to be for walking.

And will hold it up a foot higher than any walking skirt that was ever made.

Learn to Cultivate a Smiling Expression

WRINKLES do not appear on faces that have constantly smiled. Smiling is the best possible massage. Contentment is the fountain of youth.

People have a readier welcome for the smiling, happy face than for the one shadowed by sorrow, pain or vexation.

A smiling face will often prove the key to unlock the door of success. "I like to have him around because he is always cheerful," said a business man one day, when questioned as to why he chose one of two persons to advance to a position of trust. "You can never refuse her request," said a woman of another, "because she always asks you smilingly, as if she were sure that it is the thing of all others which would give you the greatest pleasure."

The dark side of life is not the one that brings inspiration. When brought face to face with it, it may be made a strength-builder to the individual, but it never produces the exhilaration that sets the blood flying faster in the veins, and arouses desire for action.

This is one of the reasons why the true philosopher will persistently assume the guise of cheerfulness though his heart is heavy.

By-and-by this will have its effect upon himself. He will find that even under the same circumstances the world seems a brighter place to live in. Through the gloom which has gathered about him there come now and then flashes of fun that bring the laugh to the surface, and make bearable what has hitherto appeared beyond endurance.

A woman who saw drooping lines that told of sadness and regret marking her face, resolved to cultivate smiles and laughter. It was hard work at first, but after a while she had her reward. The lines disappeared, but, what was better, she found herself smiling often at her own thoughts, which had taken on a Summer hue, and the humor to be found by those who look for it became a part of her nature. There is philosophy in this worthy of attention.

If you hold yourself determinately in the attitude of seeing the better side of people and things, until it becomes habitual, the sunshine of happiness is far more likely to shine.

It is true that success often hinges upon this one thing of a cheerful attitude toward the world.

It is also true that it has much to do in bringing happiness into individual life. The man or the woman who is governed by moods easily alienates friends and makes enemies.

This may be a matter of indifference so long as the sun is shining from prosperous skies.

When clouds gather and the hearthstone is cold and desolate, then come the hours of regret for the good will that was needlessly turned away.

TRY TO LOOK DAINTY

DON'T fail to look dainty; the most expressive word which can be applied to a woman is "dainty."

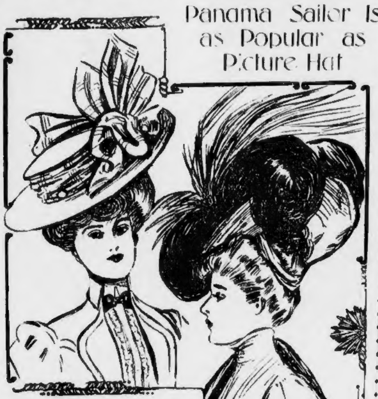
A woman may be stylish, well dressed, good looking and lots of other things, without any considerable expense; but to live up to the requirements of "dainty" means something more.

It means absolute freshness of neckties, light blouses, gloves, etc., and can be achieved by the woman or girl of average means if she will have a weekly wash of muslins, laces, gloves, etc., herself, and not grudge the extra time spent in "getting up" these dainty articles. It means soap, starch and water in abundance.

Women who would be shocked at the idea that a stranger should see them in dishabille, or with hair in crimping-pins, inflict untidy hideousness upon husbands and sons, fathers and brothers, quite as a matter of course; they are nobodies and so do not count.

SMART STRAW HATS FOR EARLY SUMMER

Panama Sailor Is as Popular as Picture Hat



SAILOR hats, with plaid ribbon bows, are quite the jauntiest headgear to be worn with street suits.

This one is of Panama straw, with green and blue plaid ribbon tied in a stiff, smart bow at one side.

Under the brim, on the left side, and a little toward the back, the hat is lifted off the head by a deep band, and filled in with a cluster of green leaves and foliage.

Quite a new idea is the ribbon strap, which falls over the hair in the back and holds the hat in place on the head.

With large picture hats it is especially useful and becoming.

In this one the ribbon is the same shade as the straw, which is a dull brown. The large plumes are of several colors, harmoniously blended.

Expert Pointers on the Care of Pets

BIRD sand which is too dry and dusty may be rendered fit for use by mixing it with a tenth part of fresh garden mould.

Rabbits are born blind, like kittens, but their eyes open on the fifth day. They can feed themselves when a month old, but should be kept with the mother for another two weeks.

A canary which is often allowed to fly round the room will be a poor singer. One might imagine that the reverse would be the case, but the exercise probably uses up all the bird's energies, so that it has little to spare for singing.

Rabbits are generally fed three times a day, but it is necessary to be on the watch to see that they do not waste their food. If a rabbit is found doing this its meals should be reduced to two a day, as it is a sure sign that it is having more than is good for it.

Never take your dog out for a run directly after it has had a meal. If the exercise is at all hard the food will remain undigested for hours. It is best not to allo a dog to play even directly after he ha swallowed his dinner. In a little time h can do so, but do not encourage him t romp about.

If your parrot is constantly gnawin its feet give it a new, rough perch, and paint the feet with an infusion of carboli acid oil (1 in 100). This will generall remove the irritation.

Canaries are as varied in their dispos tions and attainments as human being Bechstein, the great authority, says: "Som are gay, others melancholy; some quarre some, others mild; some intelligent, other stupid: some quick, others lazy; som greedy, others frugal; some petulant, oth ers gentle; some ardent, others cold."

Damp is the greatest evil to which th dog confined outside the house in a kenne is liable. It will kill the strongest dog and must be carefully guarded against. I a dog is to keep in health, too, it is nece sary that it should be able to enjoy plen of sunlight, and the kennel should alway be placed facing south, except in the ho test parts of the day in Summer, when should be moved into the shade.

HINTS TO HOUSEKEEPERS

For Cleaning Jewelry

FOR cleaning jewelry there is nothing better than ammonia and water. If very dull or dirty, rub a little soap on a soft brush and brush them in this wash, rinse in cold water, dry first in an old handkerchief, and then rub with buck or chamois skin. Their freshness and brilliancy when thus cleaned cannot be surpassed by any compound used at jewelers.

TO COOK A SHAD ROE

DROP into boiling water, and cook gently for twenty minutes; then take from the fire and drain. Butter a tin plate, and lay the drained roe upon it. Dredge well with salt and pepper, and spread soft butter over it; then dredge thickly with flour. Cook in the oven for half an hour, basting frequently with salt, pepper, flour, butter and water.

KING'S PUDDING

FOUR tablespoonfuls flour, quarter-pound butter, two tablespoonfuls sugar, two eggs, a little milk, one teaspoonful baking powder, strawberry jam.

Beat the butter and sugar to a cream, beat up the eggs and stir them in gradually; sift the flour gently among the butter and eggs, then add about a tablespoonful o milk, and, last of all, the baking powder.

Butter a pudding mould and put into it large spoonful of jam, pour in the pudding cover with buttered paper and steam fo two hours.

"THE impulse was kind, but it only postponed the inevitable for a little while," he said in dull, hopeless tones. How futile it was for a man to think he could bar the door on his past. "The man has found out my secret. I'll go and face him at once. At least he shall not say that I was a coward when the game was lost——"

"Stop!" she cried, laying an insistent hand on his arm, as he made a step forward. "For your own sake do not act rashly. There may be—there must be some way of avoiding a meeting."

Herries gave a little mirthless laugh.

"Oh, I know the man," he said impatiently. "I might refuse to see him to-day; what then? He'll come to-morrow. It is not accident or chance that has brought him here. He knows who John March is; He has found out—as you have found out, so before long all the world will have found out!"

His Great Debt

"I have known for weeks where to find you," Olga Vail said, "and I come with a fixed purpose: I had a question to ask you. You dropped something in my room that night when you were escaping from the flat where your wife lay murdered, Mr. Herries," never once taking her eyes off his face—"something that I destroyed immediately lest the police should learn, too, what it told me—what John March's name really was."

"It was you who found that lost pocketbook? And you destroyed it lest it should fall into the hands of the police? Thank you for that," he said. "I read of your escape from the train disaster, of course—believe me, I was more distressed than I can say that you had been arrested. I had not forgotten how kind you were the night that tragic thing happened. They did you an infamous wrong——"

"You did not believe that it was I who killed your wife?" said she in a low voice, with her dark eyes bent intently on him.

"I knew the police had made a hideous blunder——"

"You knew?" she whispered. "You knew? How did you know?"

"I felt sure, with a certainty amounting almost to actual knowledge," he said, puzzled by her manner. "I knew that the woman who was so kind to me that night could not have been guilty; I feel still more sure, if that were possible, now——"

"Why?" she demanded quickly.

"Until your words of a moment ago I did not dream that you knew John March's real name. Yet it seems you have known it since that night," he said. "When you were arrested it was in your power to tell the police how John March had climbed down on to your balcony just before the discovery of the murder, and you could have told the police, too, where to find that same John March they were searching for. And you kept silent—you must have done so, for I have had no police visit. I know from that fact alone. I think only a woman incapable of such a crime would have done that."

As he spoke John Herries was thinking how tremendous a debt he owed to this woman who the police were hunting—this woman who had shielded a man because she believed him to be innocent.

A Last Question

What she had done for him had been unavailing, of course, and his eyes wandered dully to the great old house beyond the trees, where a man waited whose testimony alone could send him to the electric chair. He had fled furtively from the Lexington avenue flat, instead of informing the police of his tragic discovery, and that no doubt would be read as positive evidence of guilt.

But that her attempt to shield him had been unavailing did not lessen his feeling of deep gratitude.

"I think if I had quite realized what I was to undergo—what it would be like sitting alone, brooding over the shame and injustice, I might have spoken. After all, self-preservation is the first law," the girl said.

"And in prison strange thoughts came to me—thoughts that hadn't occurred to me before—that impelled me to come to you to-day to ask you this one question"—her eyes, unnaturally bright, were fastened feverishly upon him, as though they would read in his face if the answer he made were the truth. "This question—Would you save me, if you could?"

"How could I save you?" Herries asked, even yet not understanding the underlying significance of her question. "When I heard of your arrest my first impulse was to go to the police on your behalf. But I could have done nothing. In my mind I was convinced of your innocence, but I could have given no shred of proof. I could not account for your movements at the time the murder took place. I should only have been arrested, too, in the unavailing attempt to help you."

"Then you—you have no idea how that jewelry, belonging to your dead wife, the sole evidence against me, came to be in my flat?" she whispered, breathlessly. "Tell me, John March!"

Herries started.

CHAPTER XXI.

The Woman's Plan

HERRIES understood at last.

"You mean, did I place it where it was found by the police in your room during the moments you left me alone in your room before I left your flat? You mean, am I the murderer of that poor woman whose husband I was, and did I repay your kindness by an act of unspeakable treachery? You mean, did I place those gewgaws in your room to fix my own guilt on another's shoulders?" cried Herries incredulously. "Great Heaven! you can think that of me—you can think that?"

"Yes," she answered, with a feverish excitement burning in her eyes, "I did ask myself that, not once only or twice! How else could those trinkets have come there? Waiting in prison, desperate, half mad, I told myself that they could only have been placed there by you—by you—on that night! Tell me the truth," she demanded wildly, "did you do this thing? Did you—did you? The truth, I want the truth!"

She paused, but before he could answer she broke out passionately, half hysterically:

"No, no! I wronged you! I know now how unjust my suspicions have been! I wronged you—your face tells me that. Forgive me, you don't know what it is like to be in prison with only one's thoughts for company, driving one mad. And you can't guess how hard I fought against the suspicions! I didn't want to think ill of you, because I—I——"

"Hush!" Herries said, touching her arm gently. "You must be calm. This excitement is dangerous—for us both. You may believe one thing! Whoever struck that blow, it was not I. My wife was lying dead in the room at the time I entered the flat. Whoever put those trinkets in your room, it was not I. You may believe that."

"Oh, how I've wanted to believe it—and I do believe it now!" she cried in bitter self-reproach. "I think I must have been mad to accuse you! I can't forgive myself for suspecting it even for a moment!" Her eyes glittered feverishly.

"You must not talk like that," Herries said gently. "There is nothing to forgive. I realize how black circumstances looked against me, and I can scarcely wonder at your suspicion. But was it not dangerous, your coming here, with the police searching for you?"

"There was great danger in remaining where I was. I felt I should be safer once I got away from the place where the police had last seen me. Besides, I—I had to see you; those suspicions of which I now feel so ashamed would not let me rest," she said.

WALTHAM IN FESTAL DRESS

WALTHAM, May 8.—The fourth annual celebration of Merchants' Week in Waltham was started yesterday afternoon with an automobile parade.

Since early last week Waltham has been donning gala attire, and when the final decorations were completed yesterday the city had the appearance of a fairy land. The most attractive and unique feature of the decorations is the bunting which has been suspended across the streets, giving the appearance of long vistas of curtained archways.

Waltham merchants have arranged some form of entertainment for their guests from neighboring cities for every day during Merchants' Week. This afternoon the senior and junior classes of the Waltham High School play a basketball game on the Common, and to-night Company F of the Fifth Regiment, State militia, will give an exhibition drill on the Common and afterwards at Hall's corner.

WHITMAN, Mass., May 8.—For the purpose of taking action on the question of the appropriation of $100,000 for a town hall and lot, a special town meeting was held last night, with Benjamin F. Peterson as moderator. The moderator ruled that as the committee appointed at the annual town meeting to study the question had failed to report, it was illegal for the town to act.

$5 DOWN, $1 PER WEEK

We do not puff any special make of Piano—We mention in this announcement only the names of makers who are celebrated for the fine quality of their instruments. Every name is well known to the people of New England and the maker's name is a guarantee for excellence in piano manufacture. Some of the pianos come to us and are placed on sale and sacrificed for reasons that are only comprehended by those who are familiar with both ends of the situation. In other words Trade Reasons. There are many swell bargains in this week's sacrifice sale. We seriously advise an early purchase.

Write to-day for full bargain list. We have dozens of fine Pianos not in the above list, left over from special sales, etc. Some Pianos for beach or country houses almost given away.

PIANO SLAUGHTER
STORAGE SALE

A GREAT many people are ignorant of the fact that the best possible opportunity to buy a piano at the lowest possible price is to get one at the Storage Sale. Sometimes the finest pianos that are made go almost for a song. Some pianos of the best makes that have been used only slightly, and at that in the best of homes, are sold for prices that seem impossibly low. New and second-hand pianos are sold regardless of price.

Pianos go for prices much lower than an auction would bring. There is no one to bid at a piano storage sale, the price is simply put on; first come, first served, and the careful, economical man or woman who wants to buy a piano economically, in fact, more than economically, will watch the storage sales carefully.

The gilded piano stores, with their costly appointments, their high salaried sales agents, their sellers' commissions, etc., are no place for the economical piano buyer to go. Take the trouble to look around a little, go up where the rents are not so high and buy your piano right.

Several nice upright pianos which must be sold at a sacrifice; 2 nice uprights, Chickering and Vose, $40 and $50; nearly new mahogany uprights, 3 pedals, latest style, at ¼ Boston prices; reason why, no large rents, big salaries or commissions to be paid; no fancy floors; our expenses about $5 a day; Boston warerooms' expense $300 to $500 daily; our terms the most liberal; free carting, free tuning and 3 months' lessons with each piano; why not see us at once and thus save the agents' enormous profits? SHAWMUT PIANO CO., 720A Shawmut av., Roxbury, Mass.; open till 9 P. M.

moves civilization; we are fast educating the public to appreciate our position in the piano trade; our methods of doing business and our warerooms being up one easy flight saves us thousands of dollars annually; we are thus able to sell pianos of all grades at least 20 per cent. lower than any other house in New England; see us if interested. Men Should Wear Wedding Rings as Women Do

The Ring Symbolizes OWNERSHIP. Husband AND Wife Should Wear It, or NEITHER Should Wear It

In a little place in Pennsylvania called Allentown a happy gentleman is about to be married, and he is much excited about it.

He has ordered, and put on exhibition in the jeweler's window, the biggest, heaviest wedding ring ever seen. It is of massive gold and it weighs twenty-three and a half pennyweights—about five times as much as the ordinary wedding ring.

The gentleman who wants his wife to wear the biggest kind of a ring possible is going back, although he doesn't know it, to the old days when the wedding ring idea began.

There is no reasonable doubt that the wedding ring is a survival of times when the woman actually was OWNED, and when the ring, instead of being around her finger, was put around her neck or around her waist, to lead her off behind the gentleman that had caught her and meant to keep her.

Those things in which we take a sentimental pride often survive to remind us of humiliating conditions. For instance, the Chinaman loves his pigtail. He has forgotten that the Tartars forced him to wear it, because it was convenient to take hold of when they wanted to cut his head off or drag him beside their ponies.

The Chinese women are proud of their squeezed little feet, forgetting that their conquerors squeezed their feet originally to prevent them from running away.

And so the sentimental young woman to-day is terrifically excited about her wedding ring, which is a sort of sentimental golden vermiform appendix dwindled down from the old slavery ring of the past.

This gentleman with the big ring suggests to our minds this idea: HUSBANDS SHOULD WEAR BIG GOLDEN WEDDING RINGS JUST THE SAME AS THEIR WIVES DO.

Is there any reason why a woman should go around with a ring on her finger saying to all the world, "I am disposed of. Don't look at me. I BELONG to a gentleman, and if you show the slightest interest I'll call the police," unless her husband does the same?

We believe that it would be even BETTER for men to wear wedding rings than for women to wear them.

For instance, the ring would save a lot of explanation when a sensible man is asked to waste his money in drink or in gambling or otherwise. He would simply lift up his hand with the wedding ring on it, look solemn and go his way. The others would hang guilty heads and say to themselves at once, "He means that he has got a wife and children at home and he has better ways of spending his money than with us. Let us honor that ring."

The wedding ring on the man's finger would also be a necessary indication and guide for young women. Nothing is more deserving of sympathy than the average unmarried girl wandering through the earth conscious of the fact that she must select some imperfect creature and reconcile herself to live with his imperfections all the rest of her life.

She owes it to herself and the future generation to be very particular. It is her principal duty and business to investigate men as a CLASS and as INDIVIDUALS. She ought not to be allowed to waste her investigating powers on men already married when such a simple little badge as a wedding ring could act as a red flag and warn her away.

The wedding ring also would act as a useful reminder and deterrent for a good many men inclined to be foolish. And the sight of a wedding ring would keep men of good character from asking the ringed man to take things to drink or otherwise play the fool.

Many a man misbehaves himself because he thinks it will hurt no one but himself. But with a ring on his finger to tell of a wife and a family at home, he would be ashamed to do anything unworthy of THEM.

We not only recommend that husbands wear wedding rings as their wives do, BUT ALSO THAT THE HUSBAND'S RING BE FASTENED ON SO THAT IT CANNOT COME OFF.

That is the least, it seems to us, that wives could reasonably ask. It would do a great deal of good, absolutely no harm; so it could not be objected to.

We are aware that many husbands—especially in Milwaukee—wear wedding rings to-day. But the number should be vastly increased. And we advise the young bride now, at the beginning, when the new husband is like putty in the hands of the window glass man, to get the ring on his finger and fasten it there without loss of time.

Don't fail to select a big one. Twenty-three pennyweights would be about the right weight.

Marriage pro tem. is a living lie and a lying life.

Pseudophobia is the nice name for the kind of lying which comes from the habit of exaggeration, and is sometimes found in newspapers—out West.

Selfishness is the worst of all lies, for it ruins the self-deceived.

Monopoly of divine favor is the most popular commercial lie now at work.

A lie is blood relation to almost all other sins.

An ordinary man can write a creed, every statement in which may be perfectly true, and yet the whole of it be false, because of false proportion and false perspective.

A liar is the easiest mark for intellectual swindlers, for he believes that facts are made by believing that they exist. Thus he ever has a "Fact Factory" close at hand to use in an emergency.

* * *

A lie not only demoralizes, but it also dementalizes, warping the integrity of the mind, while it soils the purity of the heart.

Little Editorials from the People

THE IDEAL AMERICAN

W. R. Hearst, Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Dear Sir—I cannot resist the temptation to write and congratulate you upon the justness and fairness of your editorial on John D. Rockefeller. I wish to make the unqualified statement that it is the best and most just article of this character that I have ever had the pleasure—and it was a genuine pleasure—of reading.

In the first place as you say, Mr. Rockefeller is not a "spendthrift," but he is a spender on useful and productive things; and in the second place, he does not dilute his wares, "Standard Oil," but delivers the pure, unadulterated article.

To my mind, and I believe that at heart the entire populace of the United States—the fair-minded, thinking public—share my opinion, this man, John D. Rockefeller, is "the ideal American." For where is the mother—yes, the father—who does not teach the young son, to the best of their ability, the art of accumulating the almighty dollar?

I repeat that John D. Rockefeller is "the ideal American," and that he is a living image of what we would all like to be—the Money King of America.

MR. E. Z. MARK STRIKES A BARGAIN

Copyright, 1906, by American-Journal-Examiner.

1. STRANGER—It's an outrage! This place is a hotbed of swindlers. Here I bought this store property for ten thousand dollars, and when I come down here to open a saloon I find it is a "no license" community. Ye gods! If I could get a purchaser I'd sell the thing for five thousand dollars.

2. MR. E. Z. (aside)—By Jove, here's a chance I can get eight thousand for it in two hours. (To the stranger)—I'll give you five thousand for it.
STRANGER—I'll take you. I'll pocket my loss of five thousand if I can only get out of this Balter's Heaven pretty quick.

3. STRANGER—Now, I've learned a lesson. I want no flim-flam business about this. You pay me five hundred dollars to bind the bargain and meet me at Dooemgood's Real Estate Agency in two hours with the balance of the money and we will make final settlement.
MR. E. Z.—Very good, sir. Here is five hundred, and I'll be there with the balance in two hours.

4. MR. DOOEMGOOD—Why, Mr. Mark, I don't understand this. I own that store property. It has never been sold to any one. You purchased from a man who said he just bought it? You paid him five hundred to bind the bargain? You were to meet him here for settlement? By Jove! Mark, I know what's the matter—YOU'VE BEEN BUNCOED!

Farmers Are Just Beginning to Learn

By Rev. Thomas B. Gregory

SO slow has been the invention and introduction of new agricultural devices, remarks an author, that if Ruth had revisited the earth at the beginning of the nineteenth century she might have seen in the fields of the husbandman everywhere the sickle of the reapers behind whom she gleaned in the fields of Boaz, heard again the beating on the threshing floor, and felt the old familiar rush of the winnowing wind.

Cincinnatus returning then would have recognized the plough in common use as about the same as that which he once abandoned on his farm beyond the Tiber as his country called him to battle for her imperilled liberties.

The first scientific farmer, so far as the records show, was one Jethro Tull, an Englishman, who wrote and labored in the cause of agriculture between the years 1680—1740.

Tull claimed that since it was from the soil that plants mainly derived their nourishment, the finer the condition of the soil the better would be the results to the farmer.

A great hobby with Tull was the thorough pulverization of the soil. He claimed that it was from fine earth, not from hard clods, that the plant got the nutrition it needed to make it productive.

In a word, it was the Englishman who first strove to impress upon men's minds the idea that farming was a science, and that in order to get good crops agriculture needed to be carried on upon scientific principles.

Tull, furthermore, believed that there was no reason why agriculture should be carried on almost wholly by brute strength. He believed in saving as much of man's labor and strength as possible, and he set himself to the task of finding ways and means of doing farm work that should be an improvement upon the old muscle-wearying methods.

His thinking took shape in the invention of a horse hoe, a grain drill and a threshing machine—not much of a threshing machine, it is true, as compared with those of to-day, but still a great improvement upon the old-time flail.

The impetus given to scientific farming by Tull started the movement which was later on taken up with enthusiasm by Arthur Young, the correspondent and friend of Washington.

Young did a great deal for agriculture. By his pen, by travel and painstaking investigation and experiment, and last but not least by a series of bright useful inventions, he did more for the ancient art than any man of his day and generation.

With the birth of modern chemistry, and through the writings and experiments of such men as Sir Humphrey Davy, Thomas Jefferson, Justus von Liebig and others, agriculture began to look up as it never had before, and to-day, as a result of those men's labors, the farmer is beginning, for the first time since farming began, to get from the earth something like a fair return for his toil.

I say "beginning," for there can be no doubt that we are simply upon the threshold of successful farming. A hundred years hence, when the truths of chemistry shall have been almost universally applied to the agricultural art, returns such as would now be considered miraculous will be the common order of the day.

We have been merely playing with the earth heretofore. When we get down to the principles and practice of a scientific husbandry our harvests shall be many fold what they are even to-day.

Funston

By James J. Montague

HE wouldn't wake much wonder
in a holiday parade;
He isn't hardly big enough to
harness with gold braid;
The ways he has o' doin' things sets
army men aghast—
It ain't the regulation style to dust
around so fast.
But since he got his shoulder straps,
somehow they've all made way
For General Frederick Funston, of the
U. S. A.

WHEN first he came from Kansas
the lieutenants called him
green,
Then pretty soon the colonels said he had a yellow sheen;
But he kept peggin' right along, chock
full o' grit an' fight,
An' now, though officers may sneer,
we know that he is white!
An' yellow as his fame may be, there's cheers on cheers to-day
For General Frederick Funston, of the
U. S. A.

An Echo of San Francisco

(FROM THE ADVERTISERS' NEWS)

IN time of disaster and trouble it seldom happens that a newspaper is not the first to give aid and comfort.

This fact has been borne out in innumerable instances, the most important one in modern history being the horrible disaster that devastated the great city of San Francisco, where miles of this magnificent city were laid waste by fire and thousands upon thousands made homeless and destitute.

The wreck and ruin can scarcely be comprehended unless one is more or less familiar with San Francisco and its surroundings, and in this case, where communication with the outside world was entirely cut off for hours and hours, the story must be told as an aftermath.

Within the shortest time possible, for example, the offices and equipment of every newspaper in that great metropolis were wrecked and ruined among the rest of the city, and it developed upon these institutions to produce newspapers under the greatest difficulties.

Not daunted by their own enormous financial loss, the San Francisco Examiner together with the two other morning papers, issued a composite paper from Oakland the morning after the disaster, and in the interim the Examiner had made arrangements to issue its own paper, and the result of this achievement was successfully accomplished, and not an issue was missed.

Again looking to the interests of others, the Hearst papers in New York, Chicago, Boston and Los Angeles began rushing supplies to the stricken cities, the first relief to arrive being from the Los Angeles Examiner the morning after the disaster.

As fast as steam could carry them, other supplies bought in Denver, Tacoma, Portland and Seattle were rushed to the scene of trouble by the Hearst papers.

The largest fund ever raised by a newspaper was that collected by the Hearst papers, which went in the purchasing and distribution of supplies to the unfortunates in the grief-stricken community.
